Ferry Data Proves Dip

Traffic statistics released by B.C. Ferries prove beyond any doubt the doubling of the ferry rates June 1 was solely responsible for reduced tourist traffic in Victoria last year, the Chamber of Commerce says.

Chamber president Alan Emery said today the trend from January through May 1976 showed a steady increase in traffic, but after June 1, ferry usage dropped an average of 25 per cent over the rest of the year.

"While the government claimed the U.S. Bicentennial, poor weather and a general economic belt-tightening were partly to blame, we maintained steadfastly from the day the rates were doubled, that was the sole reason for the decline," Emery said.

The statistics show vehicle traffic last year was 14.6 per cent below 1975 while passenger traffic dropped 12.5 per cent.

The number of vehicles dropped from 2,309,799 in 1975 to 1,971,734 while the passenger total dropped from 3,514,674 to 2,293,567 — a dip of 834,123 persons.

The table below shows the month-by-month traffic during the year.

Al Frame, president of the Victoria Visitors Information Centre, said the figures showing the marked drop in ferry traffic after June 1 are nothing new to him.

"They prove just what we've been saying all along." He added that the bureau is still pushing for reductions for foot passengers — a move also being pursued by Charles Gallagher, general manager of the ferry fleet.

Gallagher said he would make recommendations concerning foot-passenger fare reductions during off-peak periods when the new board of directors of the B.C. Ferry Corporation meets in the next few weeks.

TWO WINNERS

The 11th week of the Prevue Payoff Puzzle proved lucky for not one, but two, contestants.

Mrs. B. Egan of 1720 Sprucewood and S. W. Rohr of 1320 Point St. both turned in correct answers and will split the $550 prize receiving $225 each.

Judging of the contest, delayed a week by the mails, was completed just before noon today, too late for comments from the lucky winners. Solution to the puzzle will be published in tomorrow's Times and prize for the new puzzle in Friday's Prevue section starts at $100.

SNOWED UNDER but obviously enjoying it, Montreal area twins Cathy and Linda Brassard, 11, dig through the 10-inch snowfall that blanketed city and the rest of Quebec and southern Ontario Monday.

Bennett Orders Trading Probe

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

A full judicial inquiry into the stock trading activities of two natural gas and land acquisitions in the Grizzly Valley gas field area will begin next week.

Premier Bill Bennett announced late Tuesday that Mr. Justice Walter Kirke Smith of the B.C. Supreme Court has been appointed commissioner in charge of the probe.

He will investigate whether anyone made use of inside government information to deal in stocks of Quasar and Cheyenne petroleum companies or in land in the area 75 miles southwest of Chetwynd.

Only Monday, Bennett said there was no need for an inquiry and said the attorney-general's investigation into the trading patterns of the two companies was enough.

But Tuesday, after three more people had lost their government jobs because of the affair, he changed his mind.

"It is a sensitive enough area that the public has a right to know," Bennett said.

"I want to find any and all people who abused the public's trust."

The attorney-general's investigation launched Dec. 16 under the Securities Act will continue in conjunction with the Smith public inquiry.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said today he is pleased with the inquiry, which the opposition has been asking for two weeks, but is curious about "what new evidence changed the premier's mind in 24 hours."

Bennett revealed for the first time Tuesday that it was Vancouver South Social Credit MLA Stephen Rogers who first told Attorney-General Garde Gardom of "alleged stock purchases by a person or persons with confidential information relating to the proposed pipeline."

Bennett's version of the sequence of events leading up to the attorney-general's investigation differs from the version revealed earlier by Economic Development Minister Don Phillips.

Bennett said Rogers told Gardom of the alleged misuse of public information shortly after government approval of the $100 million Grizzly Valley pipeline was announced Dec. 10.

Bennett said Gardom then launched his investigation and told Phillips that his special adviser, Arthur Weeks, owned shares in Cheyenne Petroleum, one of the companies which will benefit from the pipeline.

Aftter Phillips received the information from the attorney-general, he fired Weeks Dec. 21.

Both Weeks and Phillips said earlier that Phillips was first informed of Weeks' actions by Weeks himself on Dec. 19.

Mr. Justice Smith said today he will finish the court sittings he has this week and will start preparations for his inquiry next week.

He said he expects the inquiry will be public and that it will be held in Vancouver.

The terms of reference given the judge call for an inquiry to find out — in addition to the share trading — "whether any person or corporation has purchased or sold property, real or personal, as a result of confidential information which they may have received prior to the 10th day of December,

POLICE AWED BY VAULT LOOT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Awed police officers waded knee-deep Tuesday in millions of dollars in cash, jewels and gold, scattered on the floor of a Vancouver vault in the course of what some detectives say could be the world's biggest robbery.

The carefully-executed raid was foiled by a Vancouver International Airport baggage handler who became suspicious Monday when he found a suitcase almost too heavy to lift. When a supervisor opened the bag he found a fortune in bullion, cash and jewels.

The RCMP were called in, found eight more stuffed suitcases and arrested three suspects before the raid on the vault had been reported.

Police are still counting the loot, stolen from 2,500 safety deposit boxes in a downtown vault. They estimate the robbery netted "tens of millions," which would eclipse the $10 million in jewels, gold bars, cash and securities stolen last year at Nice, France.

"I was knee-deep in valuables," said Jeff Hilton of the police crime laboratory. "It was incredible."

Police said they suspect a number of boxholders will be reluctant to claim their valuables for fear of running into income tax investigations.

Police also arrested two suspects in Winnipeg who had left Vancouver on a Toronto flight that was forced back to Winnipeg by bad weather. The two were returned to Vancouver Tuesday night.

Police said thieves entered the building containing the vault sometime after closing Friday through a second-floor window near a fire escape.

The thieves opened a ground-floor door to an adjoining lane and moved some equipment to the basement. There they attacked the rear wall of the 40-by-15-foot vault which houses 5,000 deposit boxes.

"They drilled through 24 inches of concrete with diamond core drills and burned through 3½ inches of steel with a thermal lance," said Hilton. "The thermal lance causes concrete to flow like lava."

The thieves cut a hole two feet in diameter, levered out the concrete plug in the middle and clambered into the vault. Inside, they broke open about half the boxes, taking only the most valuable items, cash and gold. Before leaving, they hid four empty oxygen and acetylene tanks used for the cutting torch.

The vault had no alarm and the company had not insured the vault's contents.

"They were counting on the thickness of the wall," said one detective.

AECL Agent's Name Withheld?

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC says Canadian authorities are withholding the name of the beneficiary who received a $2.5-million commission for the 1974 sale of a Candu reactor to Argentina.

The CBC quotes Anito Capra, director-general of the Swiss bank Banca della Svizzera Italiana, as saying that the money was given to a beneficiary "named by the Canadian authorities."

In Ottawa, a spokesman for Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. said Ron Foster, atomic energy president, and chairman Ross Campbell say they never said there was a beneficiary or that they knew the beneficiary.

The CBC says Capra and Gianfranco Antognini, another senior executive of the Swiss bank, are both former directors of Intercontinental General Trading Establishment of Liechtenstein, the company which received the $2.5 million from Atomic Energy through the Swiss bank.

The CBC quotes Gianfranco as saying the company and the bank knew nothing of the agreement between Canada and Argentina but were simply carrying out the instructions of a client.

VOLCANO ERUPTS

BRUSSELS (AP) — The Nyragongo volcano in eastern Zaire erupted Monday, said reports reaching Brussels today. The government of that African country, denying earlier reports of about 2,000 deaths, said no one was killed.

Diplomatic sources quoting Zaire's Kinshasa radio had given the large casualty figure.

Canadian diplomat Yvon Bouthillette, second secretary at the Canadian Embassy in Kinshasa, the capital of Zaire, had said earlier in a telephone interview initiated from Toronto that he doubted the high death toll figures.

Bouthillette said the town of Goma was evacuated when lava flowed from the erupting volcano nearby, Goma is just north of Lake Kivu, near Rwanda which is east of Zaire.

The ARP news agency in Rwanda said a substantial number of persons died but it gave no total figure.

Cut-Off Land Offer Promised

Labor Minister Allan Williams said today he hopes to have a united federal-provincial position on Indian cut-off lands to present to Indian negotiators within a month.

Williams, the minister responsible for Indian affairs, met in Calgary Tuesday with federal Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand and said today the two governments are closer than they have ever been to reaching agreement on a cost-sharing formula for settlement on the cut-off land claims.

There are about 33,000 acres in the cut-off land dispute, involving 23 Indian bands.

Williams said he expects to have a joint federal-provincial offer worked out in about two weeks and hopes to present it to Indian negotiators within a month.

He would not speculate on how long negotiations would take, saying there are detailed and specific problems with some bands while other areas could be settled quickly.

He said the offer by the two governments is "fair and just." Details of the offer will not be released until it is presented to Indian negotiators.

WAY PAVED FOR HOT TIME IN SESSION

The New Democratic Party was in a state of disarray when the B.C. Legislative assembly opened a year ago, but the way has been paved for the opposition to step on the gas this time.

The second session of 31st assembly opens Thursday and two items not on the order paper — the Quasar-Cheyenne stock-trading scandal and B.C. Rail's $2.5 million out-of-court settlement with MEL Paving — are expected to dominate the sitting.

Social Credit Premier Bill Bennett is also expected to have problems holding the line on taxes in the face of a Federal-provincial revenue-sharing agreement. See story on page 3.

South Africa Police Claim Bombers Held

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — Riot police and detectives raided homes in the black township of Langa early today and arrested 95 persons on a number of charges, including the gasoline bombing of six schools, police reported.

A police spokesman said among those arrested were blacks suspected of being members of the "Comrades Movement," a group of young black militants suspected of trying to keep students away from schools.

He said the two-hour predawn raid was "highly successful" and there were no incidents.

Some of those arrested will be charged with arson in connection with attempts to burn down six black schools in Langa on Monday, the spokesman said. Gasoline bombs were thrown at the buildings and two schools were seriously damaged.

Education officials said attendance was down Tuesday as a result of the bombings but improved somewhat today.

Meanwhile, five more persons — three men and two women — have been burned alive as sorcerers in black villages near Petersburg, bringing to 14 the number of witchcraft killings in the area since November, police said today.

U.S. Considers Tanker Controls

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A flood of recent oil tanker accidents has prompted serious consideration of a 200-mile United States pollution control zone, similar to Canada's claim of jurisdiction over Arctic waters.

The idea was discussed Tuesday at a hearing called by Senator Warren Magnuson of Washington State, chairman of the Senate commerce committee.

Although the U.S. has, until recently, strongly opposed unilateral action in establishing the law of the sea, including refusal to recognize Canada's Arctic Pollution Control Act, a leading official in President Gerald Ford's departing administration suggested reconsideration of that opposition.

The U.S. has already decided to impose a 200-mile fishing control zone on March 1 and Russell Train, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, expressed skepticism that continuing international negotiations would solve the pollution problem dramatized by 11 oil tanker accidents in or near U.S. waters during the past month.

"Given the increasing uncertainties of the outcome of the Law of the Sea negotiations, we should now reconsider promptly and aggressively our unilateral options," Train said.

Sen. Edward Kennedy in a separate move has introduced a bill requiring tankers to follow established sealanes within 20 miles of U.S. shores.

The Massachusetts Democrat, who introduced the bill Tuesday, called for a traffic control system modeled on that used to separate aircraft approaching major airports. It also would set construction standards, including double bottoms, for tankers entering U.S. ports.

But a member of Ford's cabinet, Transportation Secretary William Coleman, was reluctant about the move. "The day of the gunboat is over," he said. "If Vietnam taught us anything, it was that you don't solve problems when you act unilaterally."

However, Coleman said he was working with Train to set up a task force on the whole problem of marine pollution and had already established a panel within his department to review laws and regulations on tanker traffic.

Coleman agreed that something should be done to increase safety both for tankers bound for U.S. ports and those passing through U.S. waters. He said there are about 35 tankers a day bringing oil into the U.S.

'Despite the shock of the Arab oil embargo and the fact that we all committed ourselves to be energy independent in this country, that didn't happen and today we're importing 43 per cent of our oil," he said.

Strongest support for setting up a pollution control zone came from Senator Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, who said: "We're going to pass a law to put somebody out there and we're not going to need the United Nations to do it."

Israeli Outrage Aimed at French

TEL AVIV — Israeli outrage over France's release of suspected Palestinian terrorist Abu Daoud boiled up today into an angry demonstration against the president of France.

"Giscard, terrorist:" roared a crowd of several hundred Isaelis gathered outside the French embasy, referring to President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Among them were families of 11 Israeli athletes slain at the 1972 Munich Olympics, allegedly on Daoud's orders.

The families earlier had pleaded with Giscard d'Estaing not to free Daoud before Israel could present an extradition request.

In Paris, French newspapers joined Israel and the United States in condemning Daoud's release.

"When acts so cruelly belie words, we are no longer in the political realm," said Le Figaro, a paper normally friendly to the government. "It's a puppet show."

Foreign Minister Yigal Allon charged France with violating extradition agreements between the two countries and called in French ambassador Jean Herly to deliver a stiff protest.

Allon also summoned ambassador Mordechai Gazit from Paris as a sign of Israeli anger.

Official sources said Israel was likely to call back more of its high-ranking diplomats for consultations that could last a month or longer.

Other measures could include renunciation of the extradition treaty between the two countries and even suspension of diplomatic relations, but such steps were less likely to occur, they said.

In the Tel Aviv demonstration bereaved parents, wives and children hung portaits of the dead athletes around their necks.

"My little girl was one month old when her father was killed," said Anka Spitzer, widow of fencer Andre Spitzer.

"It's incredible that Abu Daoud is free to see his family and my daughter will never know her father."

In West Germany, where Daoud is wanted on charges of being an accomplice to murder and kidnapping, Bavarian state officials said several witnesses have identified him as being present in Munich at the time of the 1972 massacre.

The French newspaper France-Soir predicted the Arab world will show "neither respect nor consideration after the French decision."

Publisher Slams Raid by Probers

VANCOUVER (CP) — The publisher of The Province Tuesday protested a combines investigations office search of the news room at his paper and The Sun as a pointless intrusion.

Two federal combines investigators, armed with warrants, searched the province news room Tuesday afternoon and the Sun news room in the morning. The Province, a morning paper, and The Sun, an evening paper, are published in the same building.

The investigators were seeking reporters' notes and other material obtained by the newspapers in their coverage of disruptions of restrictive trade practices commissin hearings into the activities of the United Fishermens' and Allied Workers' union here last month.

The closed hearings were postponed indefinitely when union leaders insisted they be held publicly.

Investigators Simon Wapniarski and Clare Savage, of the bureau of competition policy of the department of consumer and corporate affairs, searched the desks of three Sun reporters.

At the Province, they took photo-copies of some union news releases, some clippings and a copy of a reporter's contact book.

Province publisher Paddy Sherman later protested the two-hour search as "harrassing and pointless, judging by the documents . . . that were taken away."

"Newspapers thrive by publishing what they find out, not hiding it away in drawers," said Sherman. "If the courts want to cross-examine me or my staff, they are entitled to subpoena us."

COFFEE VS. COKE

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuter) — Brazillian coffee producers are proposing a boycott of Coca Cola and other foreign products in retaliation against a coffee boycott by Americans and Europeans.

The new move in the coffee war was suggested by Justino Vilela, the president of the Coffee Growers Association. Vilela suggested that the government initiate the campaign to spurn such products as Coca Cola and French perfumes.

Vilela's suggestion follows a 10-percent drop in coffee prices attributed to the boycott.

Vilela said Brazilians must consume guarana — a local soft drink — and use national perfumes until Americans and Europeans stop boycotting coffee.

However Americans have been told to try a cup of freshly brewed figs, dandelions or chicory instead of coffee.

Phillips, meanwhile, has hired Michael Philip Ellis of Vancouver to replace Weeks.

A cabinet order-in-council made public Tuesday appointed Ellis, 47, a former Chevron Canada executive, to the $22,000-a-year job.

Ellis worked for 24 years with Chevron Canada, his last position with the company being manager of advertising and sales promotion.

Phillips said he is assured that the only stock Ellis owns is involved with his pension plan. He said he has also instructed the new special adviser not to play the stock market.

Ellis has been involved with various Vancouver and Victoria community service groups.

MOUNTIES HIT SIU

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal offices of the Seafarers International Union (SIU) were raided by RCMP officers today, a union spokesman confirmed.

One unconfirmed report said the RCMP has also raided SIU offices in Halifax, Toronto and the Ontario centres of Thorold and Thunder Bay.

The union spokesman here said the RCMP action resulted from an investigation begun in 1975 dealing with allegations of violence made against the SIU by union dissidents.

Gas and Paving Session Issues

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

The two subjects likely to get to be most discussed and the most controversial in the coming legislative session will never appear on the order paper.

The second session of the 31st Parliament of B.C. opens Thursday afternoon and when the pomp and cxeremony ends and the battle begins, the legislative policies of the Social Credit government are likely to be upstaged by two issues: the stock market activities of Quasar and Cheyenne Petroleum and B.C. Rail's recent out-of-court settlement with M. E. L. Paving.

The public inquiry announced Tuesday by Premier Bill Bennett into the Quasar-Cheyenne affair will dull the edge of the opposition's criticism of government action but if new revelations are made in the case, they give the opposition a continuing opportunity to chide the government.

The other issue close to the heart of the opposition is the M. E. L. Paving case.

The situation has not received as much publicity as the Quasar-Cheyenne affair, but as Opposition leader Dave Barrett puts it: "It gives off the odour that the old Socred gang is back in business."

Barrett is likely to use the line again in the house, and the main target will be Economic Development Minister Don Phillips, director of B.C. Rail, the government-operated railway.

B.C. Rail settled out of court with the Alberta construction firm of M. E. L. Paving for $2.5 million just before Christmas.

The rail company had been charged in a civil action with fraud and Barrett has charged that the out-of-court settlement is an admission by the board of directors that the fraud had taken place.

Witnesses during the trial testified that the cost of building a 335-mile Dease Lake extension to the railway was estimated at $80 million in 1971.

But other witnesses testified that the estimate was reduced to $68 million after J. S. Broadbent, then general manager of the railway, said he had made a commitment to then premier W. A. C. Bennett that the extension could be completed for $68 million.

Barrett has called the settlement, among other things, political chicanery, and has promised he will have more to say about it during the session.

The throne speech to be read by Lieut.-Governor Walter Owen Thursday is not likely to give too much indication of upcoming legislation or Social Credit fiscal policies. The public will probably have to wait until the introductionn of the budget, about two weeks after the opening of the house, to find out the direction of the province during the next year.

Both the premier and Finance Minister Evan Wolfe have warned that the federal-provincial negotiations over cost-sharing formulas will result in cuts in services if the government is not to raise the taxes.

The two areas always mentioned for cuts in services are health and education.

Some of the most important legislation to come up in the new session has been left over from last year.

The mandatory seat-belt bill is still on the books and the government has promised to bring it up this time around.

The Ombudsman Act will come up again, too, and Attorney-General Garde Gardom said he has some fine-tuning amendments for it.

It is possible that the all-party committee struck last year to pick a new auditor-general will make their final choice sometime during the session. The committee has apparently narrowed down the list of 35 applicants to a short list and the selection could come soon.

Amendments to the Consumer Protection Act, enforcing rigid standards on transactions involving health spas, door-to-door sales, prepaid contracts and other areas, also left over from the last session, are likely to be brought in again.

Environment Minister Jim Neilsen has said he has a list of more than 50 amendments to make to the Land Commission Act, but it is not known if he intends to make only housekeeping changes or amend the act significantly. One thing the Social Credit party has always wanted to do with the act is to give the power and responsibility for approval of agricultural zoning back to regional districts, taking it away from the commission.

Two major reports released last year could form the basis of legislative changes, but it is not known whether the changes will come this session — Victoria MLA Sam Bawlf's report on housing and Dr. Peter Pearse's report on the forest industry.

As early as September, 1976, Premier Bennett was promising a long session with lots of legislation, so this year's early start to the session does not necessarily mean an early finish.

MLAs will likely return to their ridings only shortly before the rates on their hotel rooms increase to summer prices.

B.C. Observing Oil Spills

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia government, concerned about potential oil spills in its area, is sending observers to major spills around the world.

The first observers went to Spain last summer when a tanker ran aground and exploded on the northwest coast. A man is expected to leave this week to report on a spill in the Delaware river near Philadelphia.

The B.C. government observers have come from the Pollution Control Branch (PCB) in the environment department.

"We in the branch are not in the forefront of responsibility for cleanup of spills from shipping in the marine environment, but we feel we have a role to play and the government is certainly concerned," PCB Assistant Director R. H. Ferguson said Tuesday.

He said he does not think it possible for any government anywhere ever to be "totally ready" to cope with a large oil spill.

"There is no such thing as total preparedness but we're trying to be as prepared as possible."

Spring Rites

It would be understatement of the severest kind to state that the spring session of the B.C. legislature, which opens tomorrow afternoon, is going to be "lively." Never dull in ordinary times, the legislature meets for 1977 under conditions designed to make heated controversy and bitter debate almost inevitable.

There is, of course, the gas stock trading scandal involving at least four provincial government employees and political aides who had access to inside information and tried to profit from it.

Though there is not a breath of scandal attaching to any of the Social Credit government's elected members, that won't stop the New Democratic Party opposition from trying to create pictures in the public's mind as dark and dire as possible.

There is certainly more substance this time than in the last so-called stock scandal. The lack of any material proof linking NDP ministers or even non-elected employees to stock deals in Columbia Cellulose Ltd. didn't stop the opposition Socreds of the day from generating some incredible innuendoes.

So expect rather lengthy debate on the subject, with all the Socred moralizing of 1974 about sloppy confidential procedures and the possibility someone profited from inside information to be trotted out again, this time by the NDP benches, even though Premier Bill Bennett has spiked the opposition's guns somewhat by announcing a judicial inquiry.

Legislatively, Bennett has said it will be a "fairly heavy" session. From hints dropped by his own ministers and a few educated guesses, the outlines of his legislative program can be discerned, although British Columbians have learned lately to expect all sorts of surprises from their governments.

Legislation establishing a B.C. ombudsman likely will be reintroduced, after a year of study and comment from interested groups. But to judge from the difficulty an all-party committee met with in trying to find a truly outstanding person to take on the job of auditor-general, it may be 1980 before the ombudsman is at work in the province.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said legislation to consolidate and rationalize the government's numerous transit holdings will be forthcoming, and it may result in the sale of some bus companies bought by the NDP government.

His colleague, Finance Minister Evan Wolfe, could bring in the long-awaited property tax reforms that were set in motion four years ago by the previous government. He probably will establish full market-value assessment of property and differing mill rates for different types of property so municipalities could cushion homeowners. A sleeper amendment to the Energy Act, requiring the approval of the B.C. Energy Commission for the sale or change of lease of gas stations — designed to protect independent dealers — will probably also be reintroduced.

It would only be a temporary relief, since the bill introduced June 1 last year said it would be in effect only for a year. In the meantime, the commission has been working with the industry on a set of guidelines to protect the dealers.

Judging from all the hints a few months back, there may also be a few changes made to the provincial labor code. Labor Minister Allan Williams talked of the need for government-supervised strike votes.

This session the government will also be producing its own first budget, with all the attendant praise or blame, and if he is going to keep his promise of balanced books, Bennett is going to have cut things very closely.

More than enough ammunition for an explosive session. Keep your heads down.

Luxurious?

The member of parliament for Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, John Reynolds, has obtained a copy of a recent memo purportedly from the penitentiary authorities in B.C. to Ottawa headquarters. It suggests, says the MP, a dozen improvements in conditions for inmates who destroyed the prison's east wing last fall, including larger cells and perhaps individual television sets.

The last-mentioned got Reynolds fulminating. "It's incredible. These guys cost taxpayers thousands of dollars during their riot — and it seems now they are being rewarded for it by the federal government in the form of better conditions and luxury entertainment."

Luxury entertainment? Obviously he hasn't been watching the tube much. TV Bingo, Lawrence Welk, Starsky and Hutch, Holmes and Yoyo, Bionic Woman, Hee Haw, King of Kensington, the interminable Rich Man, Poor Man, the unending list of made-for-television (read quickie patchup jobs) films of the Israeli raid on Entebbe airport . . .

That's not luxury entertainment, that's cruel and unusual punishment.

Libya's Ascetic 'Prophet'

TRIPOLI, Libya — The last time I was received in a tent by a chief of state was 30 years ago when King Abdul-Aziz ibn al-Saud, founder of Saudi Arabia, welcomed me in what was then known as a "tent city" outside Mecca.

A splendid assemblage of structures had been erected. There were the ruler's private tent, tents for princes and dignitaries, a tent for me, a royal audience tent, surrounded by Ibn Saud's bodyguards with their gold-and-silver filigreed weapons, and a dining tent where a meal for 50 was served to the sovereign and his guests.

The tent where Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi received me recently at Hedba al-Khadra, "the green earth", a hamlet near Tripoli, was a simple Bedouin abode of the type to which the Libyan president was accustomed during his humble childhood.

One wall lay open to the cold night. Within, a worn green carpet stretched across a patch of sand. Beside it flickered a charcoal fire. A pair of gas lamps blazed upon the president, two high functionaries and myself as we squatted on the cushioned ground, talked and drank tiny cups of sweet Arab coffee.

Out in the Desert

Col. Qaddafi reclined easily: He is a well-built man of medium height with shaggy hair, swarthy complexion, brooding eyes that light up suddenly, high cheek bones and hollow cheeks. He was shoeless, wearing blue jeans, a sweater and a dark overcoat. Despite the glowing ashes, it was cold.

"The best atmosphere for me is this," he said. "To be in a tent, away from city life, where there are no noises of machines and modern confusion, only beside a charcoal fire and with the earth directly underneath." He loves horseback riding when he can find time.

The 34-year-old Libyan leader lives and dreams politics. He says: "Thinking revolution already featured my boyhood. I entered the military academy solely to become a revolutionary, not to become a career officer. Indeed, my philosophy is that the traditional military establishment will disappear everywhere, as the world learns to follow the third universal theory."

This refers to the doctrine he promulgates in a slender volume called The Green Book, outlining his idea of a new society, neither capitalistic nor communistic. "The third way, which I advocate, is universal, not regional," he insists.

His view seems essentially tribal. The

LIBYA
. . . desert-dwelling Bedouins

Green Book states: "One seldom finds people who do not belong to a tribe, and all people belong to a certain class." He is against political parties — either multi-or single-party systems — and argues: "Peoples' congresses are the only means to achieve popular democracy."

He has just decreed a start to the new system and claims: "This third universal theory provides us with a realistic experiment in direct democracy; the problem of democracy in the world is finally solved . . . democracy is the supervision of the people by the people."

Yet, he concludes: "Realistically, the strong always rule."

Such is the case in Libya. Although many of his original co-revolutionists have fallen by the wayside, Qaddafi remains boss. And his revolution has unquestionably improved national living standards with massive new and inexpensive housing, cheap gasoline, relatively high salaries, free schools and medicine.

An austere, ascetic man, President Qaddafi has imposed strict prohibition and neither drinks nor smokes himself. He works feverishly and has little time for his two wives (permitted by Islam) and four sons. Another wife was divorced. An officially endorsed biography compares him with the prophet Allah and calls him "the messenger from the desert."

There is much of the Koran in Qaddafi, not perhaps excluding the admonition: "It is better to please a guest than to offend him by always telling the truth."

Countryless Leader

One can never forget, in this area, its long and traditional addiction to both deception and wishful thinking. Moreover, in analyzing the president's approach to external affairs — especially his sponsorship of terrorist movements abroad — one should recall Talleyrand's witticism: "Nonintervention is the same as intervention."

Once Qaddafi reportedly said: "Egypt is a country without a leader; I am a leader without a country." Libya is a rich and geographically enormous base but its population is tiny and its influence restricted. Yet its president has audacious, wide-ranging ideas transcending this nation and, indeed, the Arab world.

Perhaps he is overconfident and undereducated in global attitudes; or, perhaps, he lacks the wisdom to recognize the fact. Nevertheless, his quest for national improvement and his talent for personal survival have already proved to be remarkable.

". . . he really has us all worried doctor . . . he's still playing with the toys he got for Christmas . . ."

Sewage

Reports of Ald. Shirley Dowell's questioning at a recent Capital Regional District meeting on sewer system costs escalation are most interesting and pertinent.

Ms. Dowell should press her point further and determine why the CRD has committed itself to maintaining and extending an expensive, decadent system of dumping raw sewage into the Strait of Juan de Fuca instead of giving serious consideration to those systems which would simultaneously treat our sewage and municipal wastes as valuable resources, thereby providing return benefits to the community.

In numerous European and other countries, treated sewage is combined with municipal organic garbage wastes to produce compost used by farmers, horticulturists and gardeners.

This compost is added to the soil and enhances its fertility, thereby reducing the amounts of chemical fertilizers needed. Thus, valuable oil from which some of the fertilizers are derived is conserved. Furthermore, compost added to the soil increases the soil's water retention with a consequent reduction of nutrient leaching. Water, and soil nutrients are consequently conserved which is an economic benefit to growers and the community.

At the plant in Worthing, U.K., the financial returns from the sale of compost and salvaged materials not only cover the cost of operating the plant but help to subsidize garbage collection!

Mayor Mike Young of Victoria now wants to levy a garbage collection fee. Perhaps he should lean heavily on the CRD to consider sewage-municipal waste composting plants!

Ms. Dowell, we trust, will soon learn that the CRD has not adopted a conservation policy in relation to the handling of wastes. Furthermore, it would appear that the CRD has closed its eyes and ears to those organizations and individuals concerned about resource conservation who have attempted to make recommendations and suggestions to them.

Go ahead with your questions Ms. Dowell, there are obviously other concerned elected officials and many thousands of us who are fed up with the peregrinations of the CRD on this subject. Perhaps, too, you should question the provincial minsiters of the environment and municipal affiars who should be explicitly exhibiting their concern — Derrick Mallard, President, CASE, 6002 West Saanich Road.

Get Rid of DDD

I want to express my strong support for the Victoria Labor Council's decision to fight against B.C. Telephone Co.'s application to raise telephone rates by 15 per cent and sincerely hope that other organizations, public officials and daily newspapers that profess to function in the public interest will do likewise.

No sane person expects private business firms to keep operating at a loss, but they do not believe these firms should be allowed to cream off excessive profits at public expense especially firms that have been granted monopoly control.

I am an old age pensioner, not a union member, so my support of the labor council on this matter is free and some of my reasons are that a telephone is a necessity today for the safe security of the elderly, handicapped and family units with children, for small business people needing a wide local range of contacts to operate profitably, for persons seeking employment, for the maintenance of a good social life and high morale of old and young of both sexes.

The majority of people want telephones to use for the above-stated reasons and they do not have them so they can phone Ottawa, New York, London or some other far distant place by direct dialing. But the telephone company is determined to make every individual subscriber pay for the installation and maintenance of the equipment required for such long distance calls.

I have no computer or means of determining the cost of setting up this much-publicized long distance direct contact dialing, but I venture to say somewhere about half our monthly rates goes to that cost. But even if it is only one dollar it means that every subscriber is paying $12 a year for that arrangement whether they use it or not and if they do they still must pay the long distance toll.

As I see it, only big business concerns that regularly make long distance phone calls to far away plaees are the ones that benefit by the long distance direct telephone arrangement, for it speeds up their communication at a cost less than it would be if every other subscriber was not required to contribute to the costs.

Here's hoping your paper will assign a qualified person to examine the pros and cons of this issue and that the people will see the results for each argument in front page or in editorial news. — D. Frankham, 209 - 710 Vancouver Street.

Ferries Fine

With reference to the letter in your Dec. 24 edition signed Bullmoose, I travel frequently on the B.C. Ferries and wish to dispute his claim that the food in the cafeteria is cold or ill-prepared, and that the attendants wear soiled, unpressed costumes with buttons and ties undone.

Our B.C. Ferries are kept clean, above standard for public conveyances. Has Bullmoose ever travelled on other ferry systems?

Bullmoose sounds like the person who wants everything to be perfect as long as somebody else pays for it. As for me — Hurrah for our B.C. Ferries!!! Unsubsidized by Ottawa they are a B.C. product we can all feel proud of. — A Satisifed Ferry Passenger.

Get the Facts

In a letter to this paper in June last year, I expressed concern that hospital planning decisions had once again been relegated to the area of political expediency. Congratulations to all those doctors who have, at last, taken up their scalpels and are attempting corrective surgery on the problem. Although the purchase of the Helmcken Road property is a fait accompli, perhaps it is not yet too late to let sanity prevail and, just once, base a hospital decision on the combined expertise of health care consultants and the providers of the health care services — our region's doctors. Hospital planners can determine the most efficient wasy to achieve certain goals, can constantly assess the validity of those goals and, hopefully, give the taxpayer the best for his tax dollar. Doctors can inject heart and humanity into the sterile planning scene.

Politicians (sad to say) appear to be able to do little than serve their own ends — amply illustrated by the recent hysterical petition-taking of the MLA for Esquimalt who appears to have successfully deprived one area of a much needed medical facility to proved a less than satisfactory service to his own constituents. How many of those who signed petitions troubled to find out just what services etc. would be placed on the Helmcken Road extension of the Victoria General Hospital? I strongly urge all residents of the Western area (who stand to lose services they now have) to contact the minister of health requesting information just what services will be available in each section of the proposed two-site hospital.

I am not qualified to argue the merits of respective sites but expanding on the present Victoria General site seems to make sense. I understand that soil studies done some years ago indicated that a multi-storied building at that location was practicable.

To say that further encroachment on greenbelt land in the Helmcken Road area will not take place is naive. Already developers are gearing up for speculative projects. It is inevitable that some usurpation of greenbelt land, to the detriment of the area, will occur. The precedent has already been set by the removal of the hospital site itself from the western community plan. And what thought, if any, has been given to the needs of those staff, patients or visitors to Helmcken Road who do not have cars? Will public transport be provided at visiting, shift change times etc. to and from all areas of the region?

Please, let us not make yet another wrong decision on something as vital to the whole community as a hospital. Surely we have progressed at least a little way from the Loffmark era. — Jewel Rodstrom, 927 Walker Street.

E.D. Defended

The Times book reviews are generally very good. My favorite reviewer is Mr. E. D. Ward-Harris, an independent spirit whose intelligence and wide knowledge of books make his reviews consistently enjoyable.

In response to a recent article by Mr. Ward-Harris, W. D. Young wrathfully defends "scholarly books," (Prevue, Jan. 7) which Mr. Ward-Harris termed "the bane of the reviewer's life."

It's a bit unfair to lump all such books together, as some of them are excellent. However, after sampling a number of texts assigned my daughter at the University of Victoria, I find myself in some agreement with Mr. Ward-Harris. The style of far too many of these "scholarly books" is pretentious and turgid. Simple ideas are buried in jargon and originality is not often conspicuous. Books in the social sciences are the worst offenders.

I agree with him, too, about authors who mistake profanity for sophistication. Most of the four letter words in trendy books add nothing but a bad smell.

Mr. Ward-Harris is on target, too, when he writes that most of the books claiming to help people in crucial matters such as marriage, child-rearing, social relations, death and bereavement — are fairly empty of real help. They offer pat answers and mainly help the presumptuous authors to make a quick buck.

I hope Mr. Ward-Harris will long continue to entertain and to edify readers of The Times. — Betty Eckgren, 3913 Winton Street.

Purge Perrault

Sen. Ray Perrault states (letter, Woeful, Times, Dec. 31) "I would not have bothered to write . . ." Well, he would have been far better not to have written for he is the last person with any credibility who should "come to the aid of his party." This is the man who was leader of the B.C. Liberal party for years and ran it into nothingness. This is leadership? He then ducked out as a failure as a leader of anything.

But after deserting the ship provincially he ran federally and was thoroughly defeated by his constituents as "not wanted." As he sulked wondering how to make a living he received the call from the highest. Just the man, the type of hack that qualifies for the Senate and was immediately appointed, his incompetence rewarded. He immediately became Trudeau's mouthpiece and legman. Just the type to run errands for the boss, make excuses for the party and uphold the sanctity of that fine old retirment home.

Perrault reminds me of another of the same ilk, Hazen Argue, another appointed (and defeated) jewel. The Times editorial he quoted must have really hit him right where the incompetence lies. — A. Johnson, Sidney.

Walking the Dog

I wish to voice my concern over the practice which is prevalent in Victoria of taking the dog for a "walk" by driving the car down busy city streets with dog running along behind! Not only is it against the law for a dog to be running loose but, more important, it is extremely dangerous for the dog. If owners would get off their butts and put the dog on a leash for a proper walk, it would be healthier for both animals ! — Peggy Sampson, 3176 Fifth Street.

A Return to Paradise Can Be Souring Experience

By JOHN R. WALKER
(A column in The Province)

OTTAWA — As the Chinese always said, the situation there is excellent, but all is in chaos in the world outside.

Returning to Canada after four and a half years in Asia, most of that in the People's Republic of China, is still a mind-boggling exercise, with the chaos more in one's perceptions than in the staggeringly rich society revealed to the returnee.

One had felt, in fleeting-visits to Hong Kong and Tokyo, from the austerities of Peking, that these Asian supermarkets were well stocked with the foodstuffs and baubles of capitalist livng and properly corrupted with sinful exotica in the shape of bars, nighclubs and erotic bathhouses.

But it wasn't until my wife and I had reeled out of a few of Canada's super supermarkets, with their glistening aisles of junk food and their banks of fast-frozen goodies, had picked our way through a few overflowing department stores, and gazed with amazement at the new proliferation of expensive speciality shops, that we realized what massive consumerism is all about in the mid-seventies.

The shock of recognizing affluence at its present almost obscene level — at least for some Canadians — is quite stunning after the austere basics of Peking shopping, or the sickening poverty of India and Bangladesh. Even over-priced and consumer-oriented Japan begins to swim into some perspective, when compared with this under-populated nation of highly conspicuous consumption.

We had thought when we left these shores in 1972 that Canadians had reached the limits of the plasticized, cellophaned world, that small was beginning to be beautiful again, that consumerism was going to be more selective rather than simply massive.

And when we read, in poorly-lighted Peking where human muscle-power is still a major source of energy, that Canadians were making great efforts to save energy and conserve resources in the face of the world crisis, we expected real change.

But all this was hard to credit as we visited across Canada and saw the newly-risen face of downtown Canada in almost every city from Victoria to Ottawa.

In the past four and a half years, forests of steel and concrete have transfigured the faces of these cities, the night skies are glittering with all-night illuminations from the new glass-encased towers of industry and commerce, and the streets filled with even bigger gas-burning monsters, the big-car "compacts" of this great production year.

We sat bug-eyed for a while into the early hours of the morning, watching a plethora of television channels, like someone just returned from the desert of Chinese black and white TV and its three hours of dreary propaganda. But in short order we were tiring of the new law and order dramas and the electronic quiz shows.

And who could not but be delighted, after the paucity of entertainment in the Chinese capital, to return to a country where live theatre is really alive, musical concerts constantly available, choice of movies almost unlimited, and where book and record shops abound to delight the jaded eye and ear.

Of course, the chaos here, one gathers in travelling across the nation again, is being created in Ottawa and Quebec, with the lack of leadership in the one and too much now arising in the other.

There seemed to be a sour and bitchy mood abroad in the country, we noticed, with everyone blaming someone else for the trouble the country is in and nobody offering any useful panaceas, or even ideas, for its removal.

To someone, however, coming as we just had from an Asian world that really has problems and trouble enough for a lifetime, this Canadian mood, this surfeit of complaining, seemed petty and self-centred and unbecoming of a country as well favored and wealthy as this one still is.

The Country And The Man

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Mackenzie King's literary executors may be holding back until the year 2001 some of the choicer bits from his personal papers. But we have had access to enough of his confidences to his diary to know that the inner man, with his fantasies, his thought processes, his psychological crutches, was something other than he seemed from the outside in his years as prime minister.

As irresistible as a chance to eavesdrop safely on a party telephone line, or as an uncurtained window and a pair of binoculars to a voyeur, the King diaries also have the fascinating power of an ancient family album, showing not only the once-awesome head of the family but all of us looking ridiculous in clothes dictated by the fads of the time. A prime minister who looks for messages through spirit mediums, gains insight from the patterns of shaving lather and finds portents in the angle of the hands of a clock can hardly help seeming ludicrous in the eyes of a more sophisticated generation that looks for messages from astrological charts and unidentified flying objects, gains insight from the patterns of ink blots and finds portents in biorhythms and reassurance in pyramid power.

A chance to snicker at the quirks of our leaders is probably a healthy outlet for us, but let him who has never consulted the daily horoscope column cast the first snort. King was hardly the last in his office to seek assurance that the universe was unfolding as it should.

Publication of each instalment of confidences from King's private soul has raised anew the same predictable question: How could such a man be, not only prime minister of Canada, but in some respects the most successful prime minister Canada has ever had? But, unless his success was sheer fluke, the real question may be: What is it about the soul of this country that it takes such a man to give it durable political expression?

What he had was not what we now call charisma. He was not loved. He was not, for the most part, even liked. Timid, self-centred, self-absorbed, petty, constantly seeking reassurance, willing to take money on the side, constantly blurring the edges of principle in search of the opportunistic compromise, morally self-righteous and puritanical, as much upset in his time by Tallulah Bankhead as his spiritual heirs are, in our time, by Linda Lovelace, and governing always with the belief uppermost in his mind that Canadians would be constantly at one another's throats, culture against culture, region against region, faith against faith, if they were not continually coddled and conned into the illusion of brotherhood.

KING . . . more than a fluke

Such a man, with such a view of Canada, was not just given a brief trial as national leader and then discarded. He went on year after year, Parliament after Parliament, as the country's apparently indispensable man. And he did it without the least scrap of personal charm, distinction or magnetism as a sweetener.

In his sad little hoard of secret, personal treasures Mackenzie King has left us some strange glimpses of his own inner being, and ours.

Black Africa's Ugly State

By DAVID MARTIN
London Observer

LONDON — In 1968, when Equatorial Guinea became independent from Spain after almost 200 years of colonial rule, Saturnino Ibongo was one of its bright young intellectuals with a promising career ahead.

He had graduated from Spain's prestigious Navarra University and gone on to study international relations in the United States.

Equatorial Guinea's president, Francisco Macias Nguema, recognized Ibongo's talents and urged him to abandon his studies "in the interest of our great nation" and become the country's first ambassador to the United Nations.

He accepted and four months later he was called home for "urgent consultations." On arrival at Malabo airport he was accused of being involved in a plot against the president. "Protesting his innocence, he was taken behind a nearby bush and summarily executed within minutes."

The death of Ibongo is just one of the many cases used by Suzanne Cronje, a writer on African affairs, in her report for the Anti-slavery Society, The Forgotten Dictatorship, to illustrate the slaughter and repression which has been taking place, and has been generally ignored, in Equatorial Guinea.

Mrs. Cronje makes a point which is equally valid in the case of reporting Adi Amin's Uganda: "This catalogue of death concentrates only on the best-known political leaders and says nothing of the hundreds of men, women and even children who were unknown outside their own country when they met similar fates.

"In many cases people have been punished or executed without even a pretense that they were guilty of a crime. This is especially true of women whose only crime was that they were related to politicians or officials who had fallen out of favor.

"In some cases whole villages have been destroyed when a member of the community was accused of disloyalty to Macias or some such crime."

Equatorial Guinea is forged from two former Spanish possessions, the island of Fernando Po, now renamed Macias Nguema Biyogo Island after the president, and Rio Muni on the mainland, set between Gabon and Cameroon. Its total size is a little under 11,000 square miles and as much as a quarter of its 300,000 people are estimated to have gone into exile to escape the repression of the past eight years.

Equatorial Guinea was the country that author Frederick Forsyth used in his book The Dogs of War, in which a group of mercenaries overthrew and killed a repressive president.

But that was fiction. President Macias is fact. He remains very much in control of a government which Mrs. Cronje describes as "among the most brutal and unpredictable in the world."

This is a report for people with strong stomachs, as the following passage illustrates: "Pastor Torao Sikara, a deputy president and the most important Bubi chief, died of thirst in Bata jail, and Enrique Gori Molubela, one of the founders of the Union Budi, died of gangrene after having his eyes gouged out."

The intellectuals, Mrs. Cronje says, have been Macias' main target. He is once quoted as having said: "These so-called intellectuals are the greatest problem facing Africa today. They are polluting our climate with foreign culture."

By the end of 1976 two-thirds of the members of Equatorial Guinea's 1968 parliament had "disappeared," including almost all of the nationalist politicians involved in the struggle for independence from Spain

Many have died in the prison in the capital, Bata. Often they are said to have committed suicide, a disease which Mrs. Cronje notes "seems to have reached epidemic proportions."

Apart from the killings, politically decreed oppression touches almost every facet of life. Donations to missionaries are forbidden, pastors are not allowed to travel inside the country or abroad and "preaching and sermons must be censored beforehand" according to an official decree.

As a result of the exodus of tens of thousands of workers for Nigeria when the killings, and brutality touched them, a presidential decree was passed in January making it compulsory for all citizens over the age of 15 to do manual labor on the cocoa plantations and in the mines.

The right to communicate freely is banned, mail is censored and Equatorial Guinea citizens in exile or simply studying overseas have had their nationality and passports withdrawn.

Journalists are not allowed to visit Equatorial Guinea and the killings and repression remain cloaked in a conspiracy of silence, with Spain declaring news and comment on the former colony to be "materia reservada," a prohibition on any news in the Spanish press.

Western and Communist nations as well as United Nations agencies continue to give assistance to President Macias. "If economic cooperation and international aid have helped to keep Macias in power, the most important factor in his ascendancy has been the protective silence around his bloody regime," Mrs. Cronje concludes.

Highway Killers Treated Too Softly

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

In 1947, an adviser to Ontario's attorney-general stated that drunken driving had succeeded war as the most wasteful scourge of modern times. In 1950, a Globe and Mail editorial talked about the "irresponsible characters" who exhibited "alcoholic exuberance and carelessness", indeed "sheer nitwitism" behind the wheel. By 1975, the editorial imperative had strengthened to: "Drinking drivers. They are a curse; an abomination. And they ought to be handled severely." Obviously the problem is not going away.

In 1974, 6,290 people were killed on Canadian highways and legally impaired drivers were involved in 44 per cent of these accidents—on a purely proportional basis, 2,768 deaths. In the same year, 546 people were murdered in Canada.

The penalties for impaired driving include licence suspensions, fines and short jail terms (almost never imposed). Murder implies at least 10 years in prison.

Most of Canada's murders are unpremeditated and a large proportion occurs in the context of passionate family quarrels. Five times as many highway deaths are inflicted by strangers on strangers and are caused by simple indifference. We take the murders seriously and punish the often anguished killers severely. We take the highway deaths lightly and punish the killers (if they survive) hardly at all.

The Addiction Research Foundation in Ontario says that, in 1975, 52 of every 100 drivers killed in collisions in this province had been drinking. Most of the strangers they took with them had not.

We still treat drunken driving as a failing rather than a crime. We are still loath to hold impaired individuals wholly responsible for the death, injury and anguish they inflict on so many unsuspecting people. We need to change our perception: we are not after the drunks. We are after the sober men and women who become drunk—and they are entirely accountable for their acts.

Killing people is a heinous crime, whether through passion or indifference. The Criminal Code should regard it more seriously when it comes to the murderers behind the wheel. If the deterrent value of much stiffer penalties remains to be demonstrated, their justice does not.

Out of the End Zone

russell baker

I am in front of the television set watching football. I cannot say why, but it is certainly not, as certain sociologists insist, because football is a metaphor for combat. Surely a man does not want to go to sleep during combat, and watching football usually leads to a stupor somewhere between exhaustion and deep slumber.

Yet one sits here hour after hour. Why? Perhaps because televised football is the American equivalent of Chinese opera. We have all seen it so many times that surprise is no longer possible, yet we are mesmerized by the ritual into a state transcending boredom.

We know by heart all the lines of the script starting with the traditional opening speeches by the game announcers, who function as the Chorus. Both teams are up today. They have come to play. They have the will to win. They are sky high. There is no tomorrow.

Yes, there is always no tomorrow, and although there always turns out to be a tomorrow anyhow, we hear the line uttered and feel absolute satisfaction with its rightness. If this game were being played and the announcer failed to say, "there is no game tomorrow," we would feel the event spoiled, as we do in certain performances of "La Traviata" which omit "Di Provenza" in the interests of efficiency.

I know, sitting here in my stupor, that any moment now there will be a fantastic catch in the endzone. There is always a fantastic catch in the endzone, just as there is always no tomorrow. It is always the most fantastic catch ever made. I have seen it made thousands of times, sometimes several times on a single afternoon. It never fails to stir me. Immediately afterwards, I always rush to get a fresh beer, because I know that it will inevitably be followed by a time-out on the field to sell spark plugs.

Spark plugs are always sold between fantastic catches in the endzone, and if they were not, if we moved from one fantastic catch immediately to another fantastic catch without pausing to sell spark plugs, I would feel that the ritual had been violated by a profane alteration in its prescribed pace.

Sitting here, glazed of eye, dormant of brain, I nevertheless know, if the score is lopsided, that the announcers will utter their moving lines about the losing quarterback. "He never gives up — he's my kind of guy," "You can say that again."

I listen with cunning ear for their intonations when they render their famous tribute to the losing team's beleaguered linemen. "They may bend, but they never break." I once heard a vulgar announcer — let his name be forgotten — reply realistically to this line by saying, "they're breaking tonight Giffer." It was as offensive as if, after Antony had said of Brutus, "this was a man," one of the stage hands were to walk on and say, "this sissy? You've got to be kidding."

Yes, I have seen it all already, seen it all, and much of it is boring. The eating up of the clock — that is very boring, yet I would not countenance the game without it for it leads to that magnificent line, always spoken of quarterbacks, "he is a master at eating up the clock."

As a connoisseur of the ritual, I know that the eating up of the clock is always accompanied by the eating up of some ineffectual lineman. As this miserable figure is savaged time and time again, the Chorus chants, "he's being eaten up." This flight into metaphor, so important to the ritual, sets the mind roaming among images of gigantic men being chewed and swallowed in perfect harmony with the mastication and digestion of a rather large clock.

This poetic fantasy, I know, will be interrupted brutally by the ritual change of momentum — kettle drums drowning the harp. During the famous change of momentum, I usually come fully awake. Will the officials now intervene to stop the change of momentum by calling their famous 15-yard penalty for clipping? You bet your Pete Rozelle button they will. It is as much a part of the ritual as the spark plug sales.

On the sidelines, the penalized coach will tear a passion to tatters. I feel my blood boil. Bestial impulses towards the officials, rouse me to the edge of the sofa. And then — and then — the soothing calm of the Chorus: "Week in and week out, these officials do a great job."

Finally, I know, there will be the dramatic "last two minutes," which lasts approximately 25 minutes, produces five or six of the most fantastic catches ever made and sells spark plugs galore. Usually this passage produces a miraculous last-second victory. When it does, all the requirements of the ritual have been exquisitely fulfilled, and I am at last ready to sleep as if there were no tomorrow.

Japan Trade Boom Eyed

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Japan's economy is growing so rapidly trade with Canada could grow five-fold to $20 billion within four years, a Vancouver banker predicted this week.

William Hill, regional manager of international services for Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, said in Victoria Canada's trade totals only $4 billion but potentially could be many times that amount.

Japan's total trade exceeds $135 billion per year, third largest in the world after the U.S. and Russia, while Canada's total trade is worth about $75 billion.

"Our over-all trade of $4 billion annually (with Japan) could easily become $20 billion in the next three or four years. Selling and marketing are all that is required," he said.

Hill was addressing a meeting of the Sales and Marketing Executives of Victoria at The Empress.

Hill also predicted the Japanese yen will become the fifth currency to be recognizes as international money within two years. The other four are the U.S. dollar, sterling, the Swiss franc and the German mark.

He described Japan as the economic mainspring of the Pacific Rim area and demonstrated the impact of Japan on the B.C. economy by displaying his business card, which is in English on one side and Japanese on the back.

Japan has already invested $500 million in Canada and this could grow substantially in future agreements.

Canada's trade with China is mainly wheat. Sales of wheat in 1975 were worth $376 million while imports from China totalled $60 million. China tries to be self-sufficient. Canada is her foutrh largest supplier but this country accounted for only about five per cent of her imports. China's main source of imports is Japan.

Canada imports about $170 million per year from Hong Kong and exports only $40 million, leaving a trade deficit of $130 million. Hong Kong also acts as a funnel for trade from Canada to China and Taiwan, Hill said.

Canada exports about $180 million per year to the Soviet Union and imports about $28 million. None of the trade is secure over the long term. For example, the Soviet Union imported some railroad ties from Canada but used them to build rail lines into forests where they could manufacture their own, Hill said. There will be no repeat orders. Russia is mainly interested in importing technology — and wheat in emergencies.

Trade with the other Pacific Rim countries, Singapore, Taiwan and South Korea is minor but increasing, he said.

Wood Chip Layoffs

About 80 loggers have been laid off by Western Forest Industries Ltd. at Honeymoon Bay in a dispute over wood chip quotas.

British Columbia Forest Products has temporarily stopped buying wood chips from the company, which is a subsidiary of Rayonier Canada Ltd.

A BCFP spokesman said the two companies have an agreemnt that Rayonier's Woodfibre pulp mill will buy chips from nearby BCFP logging operations in return for BCFP at Crofton buying chips from Rayonier operations at Honeymoon Bay.

The spokesman said Rayonier has cut back sharply on the amount of chips it is taking at Woodfibre so chip purchases are being suspended until the matter is sorted out.

The remaining 240 loggers at Honeymoon Bay have not been affected by the Rayonier action.

The dispute is expected to be resolved in about two weeks.

Courtenay Run Ordered

Railway freight and passenger service to Courtenay has been ordered restored before the end of this year in a federal cabinet decision made public Tuesday.

For the first time since July 1975 there will be rail service north of Parksville.

The Esquimalt and Nanaimo line was closed arbitrarily when the company, wholly-owned by CP Rail, declared the cost of rehabilitating two trestles was uneconomic. The crossings at Tsable River and French Creek failed to meet safety standards.

Lengthy hearings in Victoria and Courtenay last year by the Canadian Transport Commission railway committee were followed by an order to rebuild the trestles. E and N appealed to the cabinet, which upheld the CTC finding Dec. 23 and said service must resume not later than Dec. 23 this year.

Estimated cost of rebuilding the trestles is $2.2 million, with further expenditure required for upgrading the abandoned 44 miles of track including brush clearing and rail maintenance.

Meanwhile, there has been no CTC decision on an E and N application to discontinue passenger service on the company's main line between Victoria and Parksville, which it also claims is a money-loser.

Charles Gordon, of CP Rail, said in Vancouver, "It is our intention to comply fully with the order-in-council and necessary steps are now being taken to retore the line to full capacity."

Tenders for the trestles are to be called before March and the company expects to be able to meet the cabinet order deadline.

Tom Tryon, president of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Vancouver Island, said resumption of rail service north of Parksville would remove much heavy transport traffic from the Island Highway.

Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis expected a reduction in freight costs on the north island, and produce over-all cost of living relief as well as greater attraction for secondary industry on east-central Vancouver Island.

HEAVIEST YEAR FOR MEDIATORS

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal mediation and conciliation service handled its heaviest load ever in 1976, with 275 industrial relations disputes requiring federal government intervention.

Of the 275 disputes, 242 were settled in 1976 while 33 were still unresolved at the end of the year.

Legal work stoppages were involved in 10 per cent of the disputes eventually resolved.

The 1976 caseload handled by the federal mediation and conciliation officers was up substantially from the 1975 load of 242 disputes. The 1976 period covered 12 of the 14½ months the federal anti-inflation program of selective wage and price controls has been in effect.

Among the major disputes rsolved by federal intervention were the port of Halifax dispute and the Cyprus Anvil Mining Corp. dispute in the Yukon Territory.

Parliament passed a bill in October ordering an end to a 75-day lockout of longshoremen at the Port of Halifax. In the Yukon, 380 miners and office employees of Cyprus Anvil Mining Corp. were on strike for 116 days before a final settlement was reached.

Soccer Star Disciplined

LONDON (Reuter) — Andy Gray of Aston Villa, Scottish international striker and leading scorer in English League First Division soccer, was fined 75 pounds Tuesday for bringing the game into disrepute.

A Football Association disciplinary committee found Gray guilty of making an obscene gesture to a section of the crowd after scoring a goal in a home match against Manchester United in November.

Sooke Zoning Established

The provincial cabinet has approved a Capital Region Board bylaw establishing zoning regulations for the unorganized community of Sooke, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis said Tuesday.

Under the law, Sooke is divided into six separate areas — rural, rural residential, mobile home, commercial and industrial zones.

Provincial Role In Blanshard Row

The provincial department of highways will referee an argument between Saanich and Victoria over the Blanshard Street extension.

The department has prepared three designs for the intersection at Blanshard and Tolmie.

Saanich has settled for one while the city has opted for either of the other two.

Saanich's public works committee decided Tuesday to endorse municipal engineer Cliff Warren's recommendation that it be a conventional intersection including exclusive left-turn lanes on Blanshard to permit through and turning traffic.

The committee agreed with Warren that this design is preferable because it will have signals and protect pedestrians.

The other proposals include a raised meridian and traffic island which would restrict through and left-turn vehicles on Tolmie. There would be no signals.

Warren explained Victoria considers Tolmie should be used mainly as a transfer street for northbound traffic from Blanshard to Douglas and southbound traffic along Douglas to Blanshard.

SHELTERS HAVE CRACKER PROFITS

DENVER (UPI)— A businessman said his company expected to turn a tidy profit because the United States did not engage in a nuclear war anticiapted in the 1960s.

Bill Whitt, vice president of Three Way Enterprises, Tuesday said his firm was awarded a $20,000 contract to remove and dispose of more than 53 million crackers and other items stored in bomb shelters for more than a decade.

Whitt said the 500 tons of crackers, stored in more than 400 bomb shelters since the 1960s, would be sold to livestock producers for cattle feed. The disposal program is expected to take another three to five months.

The U.S. office of emergency preparedness recently announced the crackers, rich in essential nutrients, had become inedible. Denver's supply was sufficient to sustain a million persons for two weeks in the event of nuclear war.

House-Building Rate Too Good To Last: CMHC

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Housing starts and completions in the Victoria area both hit record levels in 1976 but it is too good to last, Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation regional manager Chris Dowling said today.

There were 4,551 starts during the year, up 11.7 per cent from 3,983 in 1975. Completions totalled 4,455, up 48 per cent from 3,104 one year earlier.

Dowling today said he is urging builders to "cool it" for the first three months of this year to allow demand to catch up with supply.

"Builders are still eager to construct apartments and row housing units but we are concerned that we may be overbuilding in this area."

The apartment vacancy rate is 0.6 per cent as of November but could soar as high as four per cent by summer.

"There is a surplus of single-family homes as well."

CMHC has tabulated 189 unsold new homes, up from 40 at the same time last year.

Dowling said builders appear to have reduced the pace of single-family home construction because of the surplus but are still eager to construct apartment and row-housing units, especially under federal government subsidy programs.

He said builders will be encouraged to wait so demand can catch up with supply. In the last half of 1977, the construction boom should begin to pick up steam once again.

Housing starts for 1977 should be in the range of 3,500 to 3,700 by year's end, down from 4,451 this year. Housing completions will total about the same level as this year as work is ended on the projects begun during the 1976 boom.

Dowling said the supply of housing is a good trend as far as renters and buyers are concerned.

Builders should also find the market good, once the current over-supply of apartment units and single-family homes is matched by the demand.

Of the 189 houses on the market, 134 are in Saanich. Prices range from $55,000 to over $100,000.

There are 259 vacant new apartment units in the Victoria area and 296 condominiums.

There were 1,178 single-family homes started during 1976, down from 1,482 in 1975. However, there were 2,880 apartment units started, up from 2,104 and low-housing starts totalled 233 ,down from 303. There were 160 duplex units, up from 94 .

There were 2,468 apartment units completed during 1976, up from 1,662 in 1975. There were 1,546 single-family houses completed, up from 1,236 and 293 row units completed, up from 56. New duplex units completed totalled 148, up from 60.

Count Doesn't Move Mika

At least one "new boy" on Saanich council isn't convinced that traffic counts count for more than "little old ladies" waiting at bus stops.

Ald. John Mika wasn't impressed Tuesday when municipal engineer Cliff Warren told the public works committee a daily traffic count of 21,600 vehicles is one of the main reasons he is suggesting work be done on Shelbourne from North Dairy to McKenzie.

"I have not seen any need for major work to be done. I would say residents of Saanich would be far better served by living with a tolerable situation and getting bus stops."

Earlier in the meeting, the committee had agreed with Mika's suggestion that Warren's department submit a rough estimate on bus stops.

Mika said they could be portable, able to be bolted down, and basic.

Commenting on the need for bus stops on the Vancouver Island Transit Ltd.'s route through Saanich, Mika said:

"This area is not well served by buses. Senior citizens and small children have to wait long periods of time. It's a bit heart-wrenching to see little old ladies standing in the rain and know there's nothing else for them to do."

Instead of a partial parking ban on Shelbourne, Ald. Joe Bourque said a complete parking ban might be considered.

"We improved the street at great expense to the taxpayers. We widen the street and then allow parking on each side . . . It's the most expensive parking we have. It's a sore point with me."

The committee agreed to allow Warren's department to prepare designs and estimates for nine stretches of roads after Warren said he had staff at this time of the year.

They are:

—McKenzie from Blenkinsop to Cedar Hill.

—Burnside from Tillicum to Trans-Canada Highway.

—Shelbourne from North Dairy to McKenzie.

—Tillicum from Trans Canada Highway to Carey.

—Boleskine - Harriet from Douglas to Burnside.

—Feltham from Shelbourne to Tyndall.

—Gordon Head from McKenzie to Feltham.

—Lansdowne from Shelbourne to Foul Bay.

—North Dairy from Cedar Hill to Shelbourne.

Chairman Ald. Sandy Noel said the Mayfair and Hillside shopping centres should be asked to contribute to the cost of work done on North Dairy.

Warren said work on the nine stretches of road, if approved by council, would require a road referendum in the fall. An earlier road referendum was appoved in 1975.

Ald. Mary Casilio said she would not vote for such a referendum.

"I wouldn't consider it. We're in debt enough now," she said.

Former Trustee Honored

Sooke school board Tuesday decided to name the auditorium at Spencer High School the Isabelle Reader auditorium, in honor of a former long-time trustee.

Board chairman Horst Doniecki also announced there would be an investigation of education courses in the district, which a preliminary study showed could be improved.

The board's works department would also be streamlined, he said.

Hospital Bid Call Approved

The provincial government Tuesday gave the go-ahead for calling of tenders to build a 75-bed acute care addition at the Saanich Peninsula Hospital.

The hospital, on Mount Newton Crossroad in Central Saanich, now has 75 beds for long-term care of mostly elderly patients.

Construction is expected to take about 18 months. Cost will be shared 60 per cent by provincial government and 40 per cent by regional ratepayers.

Crude Oil Pot Bubbling Year Before Flow to Start

By BILL RICHARDS
Washington Post

LOS ANGELES — The flow of crude oil from Alaska isn't scheduled to begin for almost a year but it is already raising serious questions here about whether federal and state energy demands can coexist with the new set of tough environmental laws that West Coast states have passed in recent years.

Like an irresistible force meeting an immovable object, oil and environment are clashing up and down the Pacific Coast.

Lawsuits testing how far environmental regulations can go in controlling Alaskan oil-related developments have been filed in California and the state of Washington, with experts predicting additional legal tests.

Since 1969, when the issue of environmental protection was first raised at the state level after disastrous oil spills in the Santa Barbara Channel, states like California and Washington have put through increasingly stringent laws governing everything from coastal development to air quality.

Many experts here see the Alaskan oil arrival as the first serious broad-based challenge to those laws.

For example, a representative from Texas appeared at a federal hearing in Los Angeles last week to accuse California of acting against the national interest in withholding approval of an Alaskan oil pipeline terminal here on environmental grounds.

Also, officials of Solano County, a small rural country east of San Francisco, charge that those who want to retain tight air quality laws standing in the way of a $500 million Alaskan oil petrochemical complex being built in their county are selfish.

Installation of the complex would boost the county's property tax revenues 45 per cent and enable it to replace its 1906 county jail — and lower property taxes for its 195,000 citizens, it is projected.

"It's like a number of railroad trains all coming together at once on a single switch point," said William Arntz, regional administrator for the Federal Energy Administration in San Francisco.

Arntz and a number of other officals and environmentalists believe the state laws will ultimately give way to the combined pressure of energy needs and economic growth.

Many of the laws were passed, they point out, during the late 1960s and early 1970s when problems such as fuel shortages and unemployment were not as pressing as they ployment now is a chronic 10 per cent and state officials are becoming increasingly obsessed with the need for additional fuel supplies as the state's allotment of natural gas runs out. "California passed some tough laws," Arntz said. "Now it's going to have to face some hard realities. I think the state is going to — and is prepared to — make some very important environmental tradeoffs."

The most heavily-publicized conflict between oil and environment has taken place at Long Beach Standard Oil of Ohio (Sohio), with the informal backing of many senior FEA officials, is seeking to construct a pipeline terminal there to receive Alaska oil shipments.

Under Sohio's proposal, the terminal would pipe the oil from an estimated 18 to 20 supertankers per month docking at Long Beach to Midland, Tex., where it would be diverted north into the midwest where it is needed.

California Gov. Edmund G. (Jerry) Brown Jr. and Tom Quinn, head of the state's Air Resources Board oppose the plan. They claim it would violate state air quality laws and further foul the already polluted air over the Los Angeles basin.

Sohio which owns or controls more than half of the 9.5 billion-barrel North Slope oil reserves in Alaska, says it hasno other way ot move its oil to the U.S. Midwest except by costly supertanker shipments around South America or via smaller tankers through the Panama Canal.

The company recently offered an unusual trade-off to the state.

Under it, Sohio would purchase a polluting facility in the Long Beach area and destroy it in return for the pipeline terminal.

So far state officials have rejected the offer.

Quinn has suggested that Sohio would have a better chance if the company tried to put its terminal on a less-polluted portion off the California coast.

However, environmentalists who support the state's strong coastal protection law say they will strongly oppose the oil company if that happens. A more likely solution, some state officials believe, is an eventual tradeoff, with the state getting additional federal natural gas allotments in return for granting the oil company where to build the Long Beach terminal.

Some state officials and environmentalists also believe the state will ultimately compromise with the Dow Chemical Co. (Dow is seeking to override state air quality laws for a proposed $400 milion petrochemical complex in rural Collinsville.)

If that project is successful, it is likely to trigger an attempt at an even larger Alaskan oil-related complex by the Atlantic Richfield Co.

Dow needs 65 permits from public agencies to get started. But the Bay Area Pollution Control District, which includes Solano County where the complex is planned, has turned down the project.

Environmentalists and state officials are closely watching to see if Dow is able to show enough corporate muscle to overcome the rejection.

The state of Washington, which is being considered as the locale for another Alaskan oil port, has already lost one battle over its environmental laws.

A three-judge federal panel, acting on a suit brought by Atlantic Richfield last September, struck down a state statute that would have allowed state officials to limit the size of Alaskan oil-bearing supertankers entering Puget Sound.

The decision is being studied by the state for appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Washington's Shoreline Management Act, passed in the early 1970s to govern development on the state's lengthy coastline, is likely to be challenged soon.

Shell Oil, Mobile and Texaco have made plans to expand their Puget Sound refineries to accommodate Alaskan oil shipments.

The expansion would violate the 1971 act and bring lawsuits from the oil companies, state officials believe.

A third suit is in the making over a plan by the Northern Tier Pipeline Co. to locate a terminal for a 1,500-mile oil pipeline from the Midwest to the Puget Sound tanker terminal at Port Angeles. Opponents claim it would violate the state's siting act and are preparing a suit to stop the state from granting the pipeline company the required permit.

Washington's official position on plans to link the state to Alaskan oil shipments was spelled out last year in the state's coastal zone management program drawn up under then-Gov. Dan Evans and approved last year by Commerce Secretary Elliot L. Richardson.

The program said: "The state is not interested in becoming a major petroleum processing centre or transportation terminus for a major new pipeline to the Midwest."

In the view of some state officials and environmentalists, however, that position is likely to be somewhat modified under Washington's new governor, Dixy Lee Ray.

During her campaign last fall Ray advocated strong controls on the development of facilities related to Alaskan oil. But the new governor favors those facilities.

Saanich to 'Ride Herd' On Littering Builders

Saanich is going to "ride herd" on contractors and others who scatter debris on streets.

Council's public works committee decided Tuesday to tell the police board to enforce the municipality's two bylaws on littering.

There is a fine of $100 for the first offence, $200 for second and sebsequent offences and a maximum fine of $500.

"We will in the very near future be riding herd," chairman Ald. Sandy Noel said. "We will give them an opportunity to get tarps on."

Noel said the worst offenders are "basement clean-out jobbers."

Ald Fred Severson said part of the problem is a Victoria restriction which doesn't allow contractors to burn on site.

"They have to cart waste materials out of the city," he said. "Hopefully, we could meet with the city of Victoria. Maybe that could be one of their demands (covering loads of materials) in dealing with contractors."

Municipal engineer Cliff Warren said that since Jan. 1, contractors working on big projects in Saanich must make a damage deposit before then get a building permit.

"They have 48 hours to clean up. After 48 hours the municipality will move on to the scene and deduct it (charge for cleaning up) from the damage deposit," he said.

The issue was riased through a letter from an Oak Bay resident, Tom Denny of 170 Denison Road, who complained about the litter on West Saanich Road, facetiously suggesting it should be renamed Garbage Way.

He will be informed that particular road is the responsibility of the provincial department of highways.

The Greater Victoria area received about $1.36 million of the $36 million paid by B.C. Hydro to municipalities in school taxes and grants last year.

The figures were announced in a press release Tuesday.

Hydro said taxes paid in Greater Victoria last year were: Victoria, $744,000; Saanich, $386,000; Central Saanich, $45,000; North Saanich, $31,000; Esquimalt, $98,000; Oak Bay, $35,000; Sidney, $15,000.

The crown corporation is exempt from general taxation but pays grants to municipalities plus one per cent of gross revenue from the sale of electricity and gas.

Grants are based on the previous year's assessment and mill rate.

MAN CRUSHED

A 40-year-old Sooke man was crushed to death Monday afternoon while working on his car at his home on Otter Point Road.

Sooke RCMP said Allan Ruttan was repairing the brakes and was under the car when a jack slipped. A member of his family discovered him but by the time an ambulance arrived he was dead.

Coroner Edmond Jorre De St. Jorre is expected to hold an inquiry.

Meanwhile, St. Jorre opened an inquest Tuesday night into the traffic death of Bruce Jacques, 41, of 1082 Brookview, who died Jan. 6 after a head-on two-car collision in the 300-block Old Island Highway. Only medical evidence was submitted.

St. Jorre will also convene another inquest tonight into the death of Daniel Roy Collins, 18, of 4030 Zinnia, killed Dec. 23 in a single-car mishap at the Trans-Canada Highway and Douglas.

The inquest will be held at the Saanich courtroom at 7:30 p.m.

Gunmen Grab $21,056 After Abducting Driver

By DEREK SIDENUIS
Times Staff

A 26-year-old Victoria man abducted Tuesday by two men who robbed a Saanich bank of $21,056 said today he has never been more terrified — or cold — in his life.

"I thought this was it. This was the end," George Carroll, of 200 Dallas said in an interview.

Carroll said he had just climbed into his car at the Mayfair shopping centre at about 10:35 a.m. when two men wearing grey scarves over their faces and sunglasses "popped up out of nowhere."

He said one of the men produced what appeared to be a .38-calibre revolver with a six-inch barrel and told him to move over and look straight ahead.

"I wasn't about to argue," Carroll said.

He said the man with gun climbed into the back seat of his 1971 Chevrolet Impala while the other took the driver's seat.

Before leaving they made Carroll don a pair of sunglasses painted black so he couldn't see and ordered him to "keep quiet and act nautral."

The abduction marked the start of a 2½-hour drama that culminated in the robbery of the Royal Bank at Gorge and Tillicum and the largest haul of any bank robbery in Greater Victoria history.

Carroll said his abductors both in their early 20s, were "real cool and quiet.".

At one point, he said, they told him they were not homosexuals and he shouldn't worry about his car.

"I didn't know what they wanted and didn't ask," Carroll said. "We were passing Beaver Lake Park when one of the men said 'Let's pull in here . . . this looks okay'."

HUME
. . . ringside seat

Carroll said the men ordered him out and asked him if he kept anything to keep him warm. He replied he had an old carpet in the trunk. One of the men got it.

They marched him at gunpoint abut 200 yards into the bush, he said.

One of the men, who wore a ski jacket, offered to trade jackets with Carroll who was only clad in a light sports coat. Carroll refused.

"I said I was all right I just wanted to get it over."

The men then tied his hands around a four-inch sapling using white elastic tape and placed the carpet around his shoulders. They told him they would phone police later to tell them where he was.

He said he managed to dislodge the glasses and spent an estimated 90 minutes in the freezing rain watching cars drive along Pat Bay Highway.

"I hollered and hollered," he said. "But, of course, no one could hear me. I've never been colder in my life."

Finally, around noon, Gordon Hartley, 969 Saturna Place, drove into the park parking lot to exercise his dog.

Hartley said he heard Carroll's shouts the moment he opened the door, but didn't know where they were coming from.

"At first I thought someone had fallen into the pond nearby," he said, "then I saw him way back in the bush."

When Hartley, suspicious, picked up a big stick, Carroll yelled "It's okay . . . my hands are tied."

Hartley cut Carroll loose and took him to the Royal Oak Inn where police were called.

"I haven't been in the park for years. I don't know what took me in there just then. I guess it was his Guardian Angel," Hartley told The Times.

Saanich police said the actual robbery occurred at 11:25 a.m.

Inspector Robin Stewart said two men stormed into the bank. One man stood by the door and held off bank staff and 11 customers while the other ran behind the counter and scooped out cash from four tellers' cash drawers.

It took about a minute, Stewart said.

The pair then sped off in Carroll's car. The vehicle was found a short time later abandoned in the Gorge Road Hospital parking lot.

Stephen Hume, an eyewitness to the lightning robbery, said he saw the men enter the bank.

Hume said the pair pulled up their scarves around their faces as they entered the bank.

At about 12:30 p.m. Saanich police received a call presumably from one of the robbers telling them where they could find Carroll.

It was the second time in the past five weeks the bank had been robbed.

Back Incorporation Says Region Leader

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

People in Colwood-Langford who are unhappy with regional government should quit beefing and concentrate on getting their own municipal government, regional board chairman Jim Campbell said today.

In an inaugural speech as he began his fourth term as chairman, the 58-year-old farmer from Saturna Island also got off oblique shots at Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, a former board chairman.

"The failure of the provincial government to give regional districts adequate power to act has given us an excellent and usually valid excuse for delay and failures in providing service," he said.

"I hope that excuse is soon removed."

"I would like to be able now to draw attention to some achievement of the ministry in its first year which justified that confidence. Unfortunately, I cannot."

In an interview earlier the chairman said he would rank as the provincial government's first priority among regional issues locally correcting the "utterly ridiculous" situation where the province gives the regional board the job of planning in the outlying areas while retaining authority to approve subdivisions there.

On turning Colwood-Langford into a separate municipality, it's not technical questions which delay such a move but lack of support from residents who are afraid it will mean higher taxes, he said.

"I hope that the discontented in those areas will focus their energy in a positive way towards control of their own destiny by working for municipal status in the new year, instead of merely knocking the region."

A regional committee studying the merits of establishing a municipality in the western community is expected to make an interim report next month. A referendum on the question is likely later this year.

Gilmour Hanging In There

Mediator Clark Gilmour appears ready to make another effort to settle the dispute between Victoria firemen and the city.

Union local president Ross Cameron said he expects to hear from Gilmour today about the possibility of more meetings.

The firemen have rejected Gilmour's recommendations for settlement and served 72-hour strike notice Monday. However, they can't go on strike until Gilmour withdraws.

Meanwhile, the B.C. Labor Relations Board is expected to rule Friday on the city's application for a cease-and-desist order on the firemen's work-to-rule measures related to firehall maintenance.

The board conducted a one-day hearing on the application Tuesday and is also expected to rule on the city's request for a decision on whether the collective agreement for a 1976 contract was in fact a collective agreement.

Salesmen Picket Car Dealer After Whole Team Dismissed

Car salesmen at Cornell Chevrolet Oldsmobile Ltd. picketed the company's sales offices today to protest the firing of the entire sales team.

All 14 salesmen at the Douglas and Finlayson dealership were told Tuesday night to hand in their company car keys and pick up their pay cheques this afternoon.

The salesmen said today they feel they were dismissed because they proposed a written schedule of increased commission rates to management Tuesday morning.

However, dealership owner Cornell Babie, said the request for a compensation plan for 1977 had very little to do with the firings.

"It's an internal type of thing," he said, related to a change in the office structure and the fact that a new computer sysem is going to be brought in within the next month or so.

However, he did say that some of the sales staff have "been going outside their area of responsibility" but declined to be specific.

"It's quite a normal upgrading of staff," he said.

Asked if he felt badly about firing all 14 salesmen on the same day without any notice he said "Yes, it shakes me up pretty badly.

"But sooner or later it was going to have to happen."

Art Boyer, who has been a salesman at Cornell for 14 years, said the sales people are only requesting a commission schedule similar to one which has been in existence at Empress Pontiac-Buick for the past four years.

He said there was absolutely no response from the company to the proposal though the salesmen were prepared to sit down and negotiate.

The pickets will remain up for at least the rest of the day, he said, and meanwhile the salesmen will pursue avenues of recourse.

Herb Hill, another Cornell salesman, said unlike other car dealerships, Cornell has never had a written contract with its salesmen.

He said for a company to fire all its sales staff on the same day is ridiculous and irresponsible.

Babie said it will likely take about 60 to 90 days to install the new computer system and about two to three weeks to replace the sales staff.

Babie said contrary to earlier reports Eric Burdon, GM general manager for B.C., will not be getting involved in the situation.

"I'm an independent businessman and it has nothing to do with him."

First, the Cocktails

Cocktail hospitality clashed with zoning business for Victoria city council members Tuesday, and it was the dry engagement which had to take second place.

Council postponed three public hearings after Mayor Mike Young informed more than 50 members of the public that there was insufficient time to deal with the business that day.

Less than two hours later, shortly after council had dealt with the rest of the agenda, Young and four aldermen — Helen Beirnes, Murray Glazier, Bob Wright and Bill Tindall — attended a cocktail party at the Imperial Inn hosted by promoters of the Vernon winter carnival.

There had been enough prior notice of the cocktail party for its inclusion in this week's schedule of council engagements, published last Friday.

As the public seating area rapidly emptied after Young's explanation, many of those leaving could be heard muttering angrily.

The three hearings set aside were deferred to 7 p.m. Feb. 8.

Ask The Times

Q. Would you please give me the address of the CBC stage program on CBC-Radio, AM network, on Saturday nights.

A. Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, P.O. Box 4600, Vancouver 1B, V6B 4A2.

Q. I have just been watching a news item about the Living Will, an individual's right not be be kept alive by life support systems, such as tubes and machines. Is there legally such a thing as Living Will in Canada and, if so, where can a person get forms? M.W.

A. No, there is nothing here. It's a doctor-patient-family decision.

Doctor Sounded Red Alert and Bluepeace Was Born

At 2 p.m. Tuesday I became the sixth member of Bluepeace.

It's a new group which vows to battle oil tanker traffic in Canadian waters and prevent the giant ships from leaving our coasts all fuddle-duddled up — to paraphrase Mr. Trudeau.

A mammoth task? Sure it is. But don't be put off. For, with a boom in membership and public support, the right pressure can be put on Ottawa to introduce legislation making it tougher for poorly-equipped and cheaply-staffed tankers to enter Canadian waters.

The least the group can do is draw attention to the problem in much the same way the unrelated but similar Greenpeace group has successfully done in its battles against nuclear testing and the slaughter of seals and whales.

Bluepeace is the brainchild of 53-year-old Victoria orthopedic surgeon Harry Carter. And "new" is the operative word. It's so new, in fact, he doesn't know where he's going next!

A long-time environmentalist and bird-watcher, Dr. Carter was suddenly struck with the idea of doing something Monday night — 24 hours after watching W5 on TV.

The program dealt partly with the current rash of super-tanker sinkings and the havoc caused by the millions of gallons of spewed-out oil. It pointed out that the Americans are considering building a refinery in Maine but that in order to reach it, the huge tankers would have to go through Canadian waters.

Carter was furious.

"It burns me up," he confessed over lunch Tuesday, "why some junky

country like Liberia — who in the hell even knows where it is? — can provide a flag of convenience that will bring super-tankers into our backyard."

He called a couple of friends, asked them if they'd join him, then phoned the press and promptly announced the birth of Bluepeace.

Joining Carter are Marilyn Paul, Elizabeth Courtnall and Kay Lines and her husband Ken. I was No. 6 to sign on to the Bluepeace crew, as it were, and by the time I was halfway through typing this, two other men — George Cotterill of Sooke and Dr. Jack Morrison of Victoria — had phoned Harry to say they were with him.

But a mere eight people won't be enough to crew the good ship Bluepeace to victory. Carter wants members and invites anyone interested in helping in any way — anyone who has been annoyed, angered or distressed by the recent massive oil spills — to call him at either 598-1055 or 384-4121.

"We want to get a public uprising," he told me. "Stop the Mongol hordes, sort of thing. Rise up, ye peasants, and strike. And who in the hell wants a Liberian tanker in their backyard?"

Carter said he felt Bluepeace should concentrate first on Canada's Atlantic Coast.

"My primary concern, of course, is my own backyard, the coast of B.C. But if you don't get them to do something with the East Coast, there won't be anything done here, either."

His big worry is that nothing will be done to protect the West Coast by the time super-tankers start going into Kitimat or running from the Alaska Pipeline down through Juan de Fuca Strait to Washington. For us, the consequences are awesome, he said.

"The politicians in Ottawa waste their time with useless things like bilingualism and they ignore important things like our environment," Carter charged.

CARTER
. . . "burns me up"

So far, he admits his outburst is strictly emotional.

"I'm not a lawmaker or a politicians," he said, though Carter, a family man with four kids, did once serve as an Oak Bay alderman for two years after a successful campaign on a platform fighting waterfront highrises.

What is the next move for Bluepeace? He doesn't know.

"I just thought of it last night and I had to work this morning," he explained. "I'm not retired. Im' a busy, working doctor. But I do think if you're concerned about something, mumbling to your wife in the kitchen never accomplishes anything."

Carter said he doesn't want to charge members anything to join Bluepeace because "everyone is always asking for money from you." Yet he admits he hasn't given a thought to how the project is going to be funded.

Mrs. Lines, an experienced organizer, suggested that most people would not object to paying a nominal membership fee, say of $1 each. But Carter doesn't feel a lot of money will be needed.

"What we have to do is apply enough public pressure to get Ottawa to make our own regulations tough enough so that if these foreign tankers don't measure up they don't come here," Carter said. "It's as simple as that."

He doesn't think Bluepeace will follow the Greenpeace lead in intercepting vessels because the tankers take more than three miles to stop and, anyway, by that stage it would be too late.

"However, everyone has fantasies, right?" he added with a twinkle in his eye. "And I do have a boat — a 36-foot trawler which we've used for bird-watching trips around the Island and up to Alaska."

Harry smiled wryly.

"Who knows, if it comes to a showdown . . . I could load her up like the African Queen and sail out into the Strait in protest!"

LOOKING FOR WAY to escape traffic jam under Houston basket during National Basketball Association game in Hartford, Conn., is Jim Ard of Boston Celtics. Ard is blocked in drive for basket by Rudy Tomjanovich and Kevin Kunnert. Celtics dodged enough checks to defeat Rockets 105-101.

Kareem Wasn't to Be Stopped

Sometimes there is just no stopping Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

Jim Chones, Cleveland's starting centre, fouled out trying to do it, as did Nate Thurmond, Cleveland's No. 2 pivotman. So with the score tied and 25 seconds left in overtime, it was up to little-used John Lambert.

Stationed in his familiar low post, Abdul-Jabbar spun on Lambert and flipped up a jumphook that went through the net with four seconds remaining, giving the Lakers a 101-99 National Basketball Association victory Tuesday night over the Cavaliers.

That basket capped a magnificent 40-point effort by Abdul Jabbar, the prime factor in the Lakers' 25-14 start this season — third-best record in the league.

Elsewhere in the NBA, Boston Celtics trimmed Houston Rockets 105-101, Chicago Bulls edged Phoenix Suns 93-90, Philadelphia '76ers nipped Kansas City Kings 117-115, Washington Bullets beat Milwaukee Bucks 120-109, Detroit Pistons defeated Golden State Warriors 129-121 and Portland Trail Blazers routed New York Knicks 131-111.

Lucius Allen, who had 25 points for the Lakers, sent the game into overtime with a driving layup with five seconds to go in regulation.

Cleveland reserve forward Bingo Smith, who scored 16 of his team-high 22 points in the second half, tied the score 99-99 with 25 seconds left in overtime.

Washington posted its sixth victory in the last seven games as Elvin Hayes and rookie Larry Wright each scored 25 points.

George McGinnis had 10 points and two assists in the fourth quarter as Philadelphia snapped Kansas City's four-game winning streak.

Maurice Lucas scored 36 points, the most by a Portland player this season, leading the Blazers past New York.

Another Spree by Oak Bay

Oak Bay Bays topped the century mark again during their second game in the Greater Victoria High School Boys' Basketball League.

Bays, the defending league champions, crushed visiting Reynolds Roadrunners 105-32 Tuesday after opening the season with a 130-69 win over Belmont Braves last week. The 130 points set a league scoring record.

In other Tuesday games, Spectrum nipped host Esquimalt Dockers 65-62, Mt. Douglas Rams nudged host Parkland 46-41, Belmont downed visiting Dunsmuir Demons 82-61, and Claremont Spartans topped visiting Victoria Totems, 74-63.

Craig Higgins sparked Oak Bay with 34 points as all of the starters hit double figures. Higgins now has 62 points in two games while Ken Kirzinger scored 11 to go with the 31 he had in the opener. Tom Sinnott scored 18 points, Wayne Andrews added 16 and Kelly Dukeshire hit for 10.

Harbindar Sangarah led Spectrum with 36 points while teammate Grant Clark added 16. Bruce Shotton topped Esquimalt with 23 points.

SPENDING BINGE ENDS AS BINGHAM BOUNCED

LONDON (AP) — You can't buy soccer success through big spending. That seems to be the lesson for Everton manager Billy Bingham Tuesday after getting the sack from the English League First Division soccer club.

The Everton board, which announced Bingham's dismissal Monday night, said the team's trainer, Steve Burkenshaw, would take over temporarily until a successor is named.

At times during Bingham's three-and-a-half-year reign at the Merseyside club — arch rivals of league leaders Liverpool — he has seemed more like a business magnate than a sports manager.

He bought strikers Bob Latchford and Martin Dobson for more than $510,000 each soon after he took over.

A month ago he lured Duncan McKenzie back to British football from the Belgian club Änderlecht and bought Derby county midfield star Bruce Rioch. The tab — $680,000

Despite this big spending, Everton is 15th in the league without a regular season win since Nov. 20.

Bingham, 46, a former Northern Ireland international winger who once managed that side and helped coach the Greek national team, was not happy with the timing of his dismissal.

UMPIRE KILLED

KARACHI, Pakistan (Reuter) — A 15-year-old cricket umpire was battered to death with bats and stumps after he declared a batsman out during a game here, police said Tuesday. Police said three student supporters of the batsman have been arrested and chaged with murder.

PRO BOWL SELLOUT

SEATTLE (AP) — The 1977 Pro Bowl game in the Kingdome on Monday night has been sold out — the first sellout in the 27-year history of the game, John Thompson, general manager of Seattle Seahawks, has announced.

Thompson said the last of the 64,752 available seats were sold Tuesday. Some 59,000 tickets, however, were included in th Seahawks' season-ticket package.

The game features the stars of the American Football Conference against the National Football Conference.

The crowd at the Kingdome could be the largest for a Pro Bowl since the AFC-NFC game format was adopted in 1971 following the merger of the American and National Football Leagues.

Local Products Light Dormant Cougar Fuse

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

To be competitive in the Western Canada Hockey League, one supposes, you have to bring in outside talent.

But the local lads do have their days.

Tuesday happened to be one of them. Those with Victoria connections struck for all the goals as the Cougars snapped an 11-game winless streak with their 5-3 victory over Medicine Hat Tigers at Memorial Arena.

Rookie Geordie Robertson scored three successive goals, all in the final period, while linemate Bill Jobson and defenceman Lorry Gloeckner each added one. All are products of district minor hockey.

That's the stuff that goes over well with the Chamber of Commerce types.

For Victoria coach Pat Ginnell, the result had more significance than the method.

"About time," he hummed, aware of the fact the Cougars were sliding towards the Western Division basement. Ginnell found added pleasure in the decision coming "just in time."

The Cougars have a home-and-home series with the front-running New Westminster Bruins this weekend, and Ginnell sees great psychological benefit in Tuesday's victory.

"The players have been getting a bit tight," he suggested. "A win should loosen them up . . ."

The tightness and some weariness — not to mention poor passing and bad shooting — stuck with the Cougars for the first half of Tuesday's game. Play began to improve in the second period but Cougars still trailed 3-2 as they started the final session.

When shooting improved, Robertson and the Victoria Connection pulled it out.

Too often Cougars hesitated to shoot at the Medicine Hat goal. When they did put it on the net, things happened.

For example: Gloeckner's goal and the first and third by Robertson — both deflections of point shots by Leroy Heck — stemmed from properly-directed blasts.

Darrel Switzer, Jim Lomas and Brian Hill scored for the Tigers, who gained a player from Victoria before the game but lost two during play.

The Cougars sold defenceman-forward Keith Hertz, obtained in a December trade with Regina Pats, to Medicine Hat. The deal was completed late Monday, a few hours before the midnight trade deadline, but not announced until Tuesday.

Ginnell wanted to inform Hertz, who played with the Cougars in Portland on Monday, before announcing the sale publicly.

Also gone from the Cougar camp is defenceman-forward George Phillipoff. Because Cougars were over the 19-man limit, Phillipoff was to be signed with the Nanaimo farm club.

"We had a talk," said Ginnell. "George was very honest with me. He said he wasn't considering a pro career, but that he wanted to play this year. Rather than take up a spot from someone that wants to play pro, he said he'll go to university. He left on friendly terms."

Hertz played well in his debut with the Tigers.

Medicine Hat coach Jack Shupe dressed only 17 but lost two before game's end.

High-scoring Ron Areshenkoff and Brent Gogol of Victoria were both banished in the first period with game misconducts. They were ejected for fighting instead of skating to the bench during a fight between Glen Cochrane of Victoria and Switzer.

Jim Nill was the second Tiger to leave the game. He suffered a concussion when he slammed hard into the end boards at 14:27 of the second period.

Nill was taken to hospital and held overnight for observation. He was to be released this morning to rejoin the Tigers for a trip to Portland.

THREE FROM COUGARS

CALGARY (CP) — Defending league champions and Western Division-leading New Westminster Bruins dominated selections for the Western Canada Hockey League western all-star team announced Tuesday.

Defencemen Barry Beck, Brad Maxwell and Miles Zaharko, along with rightwinger Mark Lofthouse and leftwinger Stan Smyl, were the Bruins named to the team for the all-star game scheduled at Brandon Jan. 19.

Goaltender Murray Bannerman, rightwinger Gregg Anderson and leftwinger Curt Fraser were named to the team from Victoria Cougars.

Portland Winter Hawks' line of leftwinger Paul Mulvey, centre Brent Peterson and rightwinger Wayne Babych made the western all-stars along with goalkeeper Randy Ireland.

Defenceman Dave Morrow and centre Doug Lecuyer of Calgary Centennials were also selected.

Coach of the western team will be Jack Shupe, coach for Medicine Hat.

Leafs Stop Penguins; Habs Keep Rolling On

By The Canadian Press

Red Kelly must have been wondering if Pittsburgh Penguins had placed a hex on him when they parted company five seasons ago.

Kelly was relieved of his coaching duties with the National Hockey League club following the 1972-73 season and subsequently was hired by Toronto Maple Leafs.

Before Tuesday night's game, the Leafs had failed to win in Pittsburgh's Civic Arena in their previous six regular-season outings spanning three seasons. But Tuesday, the Leafs received strong goaltending from Wayne Thomas and blanked the home club 2-0.

"This was our finest effort in two years here," said Toronto assistant coach Johnny Bower.

"The game plan was to really check, never mind the scoring department," Kelly said. "I figured if we handled the checking, we'd get a few goals."

Elsewhere in the NHL, Montreal Canadiens bombed Colorado Rockies 6-0 and Boston Bruins edged Washington Capitals 3-2.

Darryl Sittler's 18th goal of the season gave the Leafs a 1-0 lead at 16:53 of the first period with Dave Burrows of the Penguins off for holding. After a scoreless second period, he set up Errol Thompson for his fifth goal of the season. Borje Salming assisted on both goals to raise his NHL-leading assists total to 43.

Thomas blocked 30 shots in recording his first shutout of the season.

"We played a controlled game and we're not a team that can play a finesse game," Thomas said. "We've got a lot of hard workers and, yeah, I got a few breaks tonight."

The loss snapped Pittsburgh's six-game unbeaten streak and left the club four points up on third-place Los Angeles Kings but 28 behind first-place Montreal in the Norris Division. Toronto is nine points back of second-place Boston in the Adams Division.

Guy Lafleur raised his league-leading scoring total to 70 points with two goals and Ken Dryden blocked 20 drives to collect his fifth shotout of the season in the Montreal victory.

Lafleur got the only goal of the first period and the visitors added three more in the second on goals by Jacques Lemaire, Doug Risebrough and Murray Wilson. Steve Shutt, with his 33rd of the season, and Lafleur, with his 35th, scored in the third.

FERGIE SEVEN BACK; BEAUCHEMIN INJURED

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Both Victoria golfers fared poorly here Tuesday in the opening round of a National Golf Association Open tournament.

Cec Ferguson carded a one-over-par 74, seven strokes off the pace, while Bob Beauchemin was forced to withdraw because of torn ankle ligaments.

Al Chandler of Colombia, Mo., holds the lead with a 66 over the 7,165-yard course while Dave Barr of Kelowna and Muncie Booth of Vancouver topped the Canadian contingent. Barr and Booth both fired 70s to share ninth spot.

Bob Cox Jr. of Vancouver fired a 33 on the front nine but slipped to a 39 coming back for a 72.

The $55,000, 72-hole event continued today.

Five Flyers Picked

MONTREAL (CP) — Philadelphia Flyers, the team with the best record in the Clarence Campbell Conference of the National Hockey League, placed five players on the conference's all-star team, it was announced today.

Goaltender Bernie Parent, defencemen Jim and Joe Watson and centres Bobby Clarke and Rick MacLeish were chosen to the team which will meet the Prince of Wales Conference all-star club in the 30th annual all-star game Jan. 25 in Vancouver.

Three members of New York Islanders — goaltender Glenn Resch, defenceman Denis Potvin and left winger Clark Gillies — rightwingers Rod Gilbert and rookie Don Murdoch of New York Rangers, defenceman Phil Russell of Chicago Black Hawks and leftwinger Eric Vail of Atlanta Flames round out the starting 12 players.

Voting for the team was done by members of the Professional Hockey Writers' Association in the nine conference cities. The voting has nothing to do with the official NHL all-star teams chosen at the end of the season.

Coach Fred Shero, whose Flyers won the Campbell Conference title last season, will name another eight players to the team early next week. Each of the nine teams must have a representative in the game which means Shero must select at least one player from St. Louis Blues, Vancouver Canucks, Colorado Rockies and Minnesota North Stars.

Among the 12 players voted to the Campbell team, Gilbert has the most experience in all-star competition, having played in seven previous games. Potvin, the only unanimous choice on the team is the highest pointman among the 12 with three goals and one assist in three games.

Following are the voting results for the 12 players named to the team:

Event for Every Runner In Annual Thetis Relays

There will be a race for everybody when the 10th annual Thetis Lake relays are held from the main beach at the lake on Sunday.

The events start at 11 a.m. with the elementary school races for boys and girls, 10 years of age and under, and for boys and girls in grade seven or under, and each will be of four by one-mile distances.

The junior and senior secondary, open, masters and recreational events will start at 1 p.m. There will be separate categories for junior secondary girls and boys, grade 10 and under (4x1.5 miles); senior secondary girls, open women and recreational runners (4x1.5 miles); senior secondary boys, grades 10-12 (4x3 miles), and open men and masters (4x3 miles).

The masters division is for over-40 athletes.

The recreational category is for anyone who just wants to go for a run. Contestants can run one lap, two, or whatever distance they like. Just come out and run is the general idea.

Each team in this category will be asked to submit an estimate of their time and the closest team to the predicted time will win a trophy.

Winning teams in all divisions will receive trophies and there will be other awards for individual performances.

All contestants must report at least half an hour before the scheduled start of their events. There is a $2 entry fee for a team (four members) and each team must have a coach or recorder present to record individual times.

Poor weather will not be a deterrent because a key phrase on the application form says:

"The race will be run, absolutely regardless of weather."

MEEKER A SPEAKER

Howie Meeker, a hockey coach, author and the likeable "gee whiz" analyst on Hockey Night in Canada telecasts, will be one of the featured speakers at the 10th annual Victoria Sports Celebrity Dinner at the Empress Hotel on Monday, March 14.

Co-sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of Saanich and the Greater Victoria Sports Council, the dinner each year honors top athletes and teams, along with dedicated sports personalities in the Victoria area. Proceeds go to assist Kiwanis charities.

A former National Hockey League player, Meeker, now 52, broke into the NHL in 1946 with the Toronto Maple Leafs. He scored 27 goals and had 18 assists in his inaugural season to win the Calder Trophy rookie award.

A right winger, Meeker played in 346 NHL games, scored a total of 83 goals and had 102 assists. He was on Stanley Cup winning teams with Toronto in 1947, 1948, and 1951.

He has written several books on how to play hockey, has a national TV instructional program and admits to still getting excited when he sees a good play, or a bad play, at a game he is analysing.

A native of Ontario, Meeker lived in Newfoundland until recently. He now resides on Vancouver Island.

Meeker will be one of five speakers at the dinner. Others will be announced later. Tickets are $17.50 and are available from committee members.

'A Fraud to the Fans'

CHICAGO (AP) — Walter O'Malley, owner of Los Angeles Dodgers and one of the most powerful men in baseball, testified Tuesday that his club's policy was not to sign "instant" free agents.

O'Malley said he had "hoped other clubs would follow" but that only Cincinnati Reds took a similar position.

O'Malley was testifying in Oakland A's owner Charles O. Finley's $3.5 million suit against commissioner Bowie Kuhn — who voided sales of Rollie Fingers and Joe Rudi to Boston Red Sox for $1 million each and Vida Blue to New York Yankees for $1.5 million.

O'Malley, who testified that he refused to sell Duke Snider, Roy Campanella or Gil Hodges to Philadelphia Phillies in 1953 for $650,000 and five minor league players, said Finley's sale of three players would have been "a fraud to the fans."

O'Malley also testified that at a meeting last year to discuss free agents, he drew up a "white paper" on the Dodgers' policy of not signing free agents.

"I gave a copy to the commissioner, another to Buzzie Bavasi (San Diego) and Bob Howsam (Cincinnati) but decided not to distribute the papers, otherwise it might look like conspiracy."

O'Malley, often called the commissioner behind the scenes, testified: "I've been very careful, especially with commissioner Kuhn, not to recommend anything. If he wants my opinion, I don't hesitate to give it to him. But he's not the type of commissioner you can tell what to do."

O'Malley insisted that the commissioner's powers were broadened in 1964 and "we restored the powers commissioner Kenesaw (Mountain) Landis had.

"What we needed was a strong, positive commissioner. If not, we could be placed under a state or federal commission and that would be horrible."

O'Malley, who is a member of baseball's executive committee, also testified that a conference call involving the committee and commissioner Kuhn was held shortly before Kuhn voided the Finley sales.

O'Malley said that both presidents Lee MacPhail of the American League and Charles Feeney of the National said they were not happy with the sales but believed that the commissioner should not disturb them.

"I was one of the last to talk and I said that we no longer have a reserve clause and this could be a travesty to baseball," said O'Malley. "I said championship teams should not be broken or bought during a season. I recommended no action."

The bench trial before U.S. District Judge Frank J. McGarr is expected to conclude before the end of the week. Kuhn, who may be the final witness, is scheduled to testify today.

Jerk With Looped Cord Makes Hook-Pulling Easy

Most anglers, at one time or another, have found themselves in the embarassing position of being on the wrong end of the line — with a hook firmly imbedded in some part of their anatomy.

It happens to both the best and worst of us.

Of course, the best thing to do is to trot down to the emergency department of the nearest hospital to have the hook removed by qualified medical personnel. But that's not always feasible or desirable if you're many miles from civilization and the fish are in a feeding mood.

The traditional method of extraction involves the rather painful process of pushing the point of the hook out through the skin, clipping off the barb and then pulling the hook back through the entry hole.

But there is a better, less painful method that is now being used in some hospitals in the United States.

The method, which apparently originated among commercial fishermen in southern Australia, involves jerking the hook back out the entry hole with a loop of cord.

The idea of jerking a barbed hook out with a cord might be difficult to accept, both by the patient and by the fellow angler doing the operation in a boat or on the bank of a stream.

But done right, there is no ripping or tearing of flesh and the only evidence remaining might be a tiny hole and a couple of drops of blood.

Since two hands are needed, the operation should be carried out by someone other than the victim.

So here's the procedure:

First, cut off any hardware — plug, spoon or spinner — by clipping the hook eye. Then make a loop of strong cord or string about 18 inches long and wrap one end around your hand.

The other end of the loop should be slipped over the shank of the hook and placed against the bend.

Then, with a finger, depress the shank of the hook to disengage the barb from the punctured flesh. With the loop parallel to the shank, take up the slack in the cord and then pull the hook out with a quick strong jerk.

Three points for potential medics to remember are to use cord strong enough to pull the hook out, make sure the barb is out of the flesh and tie the loops long enough so that one jerk will ensure complete removal.

Also make sure to jerk the cord in line with the hook shank.

Then, it's only a matter of daubing on some iodine or other suitable antiseptic and obtaining a tetanus shot at the earliest convenient time.

NIBBLES: In North America we tend to think only in terms of pest animals and birds imported to this continent without considering what some of our own emigrant species have done in other parts of the world . . . The muskrat was sent to Czechoslovakia in the early 1900's as a new source of commercial pelts, several of these rodents multiplied so much that in 20 years they were escaping from fur farms and spreading across the continent . . . Europeans came to hate them for their skill at undermining railway beds and digging into dikes used as barriers against the sea . . . Other "pests" exported from North America are the eastern grey squirrel, largemouth bass, oyster drill, Canada goose and slipper limpet mollusk.

Leafs Take Lead

Dale Cook and Kerry Brewster each fired three goals Tuesday to help Maple Leafs take over first place in the South Island Big Six Hockey League.

Leafs moved one point ahead of runner-up Chemainus Blues by defeating Juan de Fuca Merchants 8-3 at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Chris Riddell and Murray Kennett scored the other Leaf goals while John Murray, Dave Mason and Bryce Charlong connected for Merchants.

Larry Boldt and Kelly Hunter of Juan de Fuca were the busiest netminders with 37 stops while Ken Olson blocked 25 shots for Maple Leafs.

Trilecs Toppled By Little Giants

Little Giant Bakeries took a 31-18 half-time lead en route to a 60-43 romp over Trilec Installations during a Victoria League game Tuesday night at Lambrick Park School.

Ken Weins set the pace for Bakers with 12 points while Darrel Johnson scored 14 points to top Trilec.

Victory moved Bakers to within two points of fourth-place Trilec and the final playoff spot.

Matheson Keeps Hawkes in Lead

Substitute Don Matheson skipped the Bob Hawkes rink to a 6-5 extra-end victory over Gord Paterson in the Carling O'Keefe men's super league of curling at the Racquet Club Tuesday night.

That victory enabled the Hawkes rink to maintain its share of first place with Steve Skillings who defeated Tim Horrigan 6-5 and knocked him out of a four-way tie for the lead.

Ted Jurista hammered Bob Gallaugher 10-2 and Keith Dagg defeated Len Becker 6-5 in other games.

Horrigan and Gallaugher are second, one game behind the two leaders who have 7-4 records.

Connors Provides The Early Power

Scott Connors staked Saanich Braves to an early lead by scoring the first three goals of the game and the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League leaders responded by tripping Juan de Fuca King John Gulls 7-3 Tuesday night at Pearkes Arena.

The win boosted Braves six points ahead of runner-up Fuller Lake Flyers.

Murray McLaren added two goals for Saanich while singles were contributed by Wayne Himmelman and Rob Coldwell.

Dave McLachlan, Kevin Kellington and Bob Grant replied for Gulls, who trailed 5-1 after the first period and 7-1 going into the final frame.

Ken Shaw and Jim Andrews shared goaltending duties for Juan de Fuca and finished with 56 saves while Mike Duch stopped 23 shots on the Saanich net.

Monday to L.A.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers, who were shut out in the recent scramble for free agents at the winter baseball meetings, Tuesday obtained outfielder Rick Monday from the Chicago Cubs in a trade for outfielder Bill Buckner, infielder Ivan de Jesus and pitcher Jeff Albert.

Monday, 31, is an 11-year veteran centre fielder who hit .272 in 1976 for the Cubs. He gained national attention for an incident at Dodger Stadium last season in which he prevented two persons from burning the American flag on the field.

In addition to Monday, the Dodgers received relief pitcher Mike Garman.

Monday hit 32 home runs and scored 107 for career highs last season while alternating between the outfield and first base. His slugging percentage of .507 — based on extra base hits — in 1976 was fourth best in the National League.

Monday also was outstanding in the field, recording the second best fielding percentage for an outfielder in the league at .993, making only two errors in 284 chances.

A native of nearby Santa Monica, Calif., Monday came to the Cubs in 1971 from Oakland in a trade which sent Cubs pitcher Ken Holtzman to the Bay Area team.

Garman, 27, is a right-hander with a strong fast ball. He was 2-4 with a 4.97 ERA in 47 games with six saves last year. Garman broke in with the Boston Red Sox after he was their No. 1 choice in the June, 1967, free agent draft. He was traded to St. Louis in 1974 where he spent two years.

Liverpool Steams Past Crystal Palace

LONDON (AP-Reuter) — Liverpool steamed into the fourth round of the English FA Cup Tuesday night with a come-from-behind 3-2 victory over Crystal Palace.

Meanwhile, star-studded Fulham was knocked out of the Cup in a humiliating 5-0 defeat at the hands of Swindon.

Wimbledon gave away a penalty to lose 1-0 at Middlesbrough, leaving just one non-league team in the competition.

In the other third-round replays, following draws in last Saturday's games, Manchester City knocked out West Bromwich 1-0 while Bristol Rovers and Nottingham Forest played to a 1-1 tie after extra time and will have to meet again.

Another game that must be replayed was the 0-0 extra-time draw played by Orient and Darlington.

In the only English League First Division game played Tuesday night, Queen's Park Rangers eased their relegation fears with a 2-1 win over Tottenham Hotspur in an all-London derby.

Stan Bowles sent three defenders the wrong way for his 17th goal of the season in the 11th minute and Dave Clement hammered home Rangers' second tally after 17 minutes.

Crystal Palace, playing before a home crowd of 42,664, shocked Liverpool by taking the lead after 17 minutes with a goal by Paul Hinshelwood. But Kevin Keegan equalized three minutes later. When Steve Heighway scored twice in five minutes in the second half to put the league champions up 3-1, they seemed to be cruising to victory.

Battling to the end, Palace pulled back to within one goal when George Graham scored in the 88th minute but couldn't get the tying goal.

Pollution Warning in Western Development Study

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

An Environment Canada study of the Capital Region's western community recommends against development on marine clay soil such as that near the Esquimalt Lagoon where a subdivision is cauing environmental problems.

The western community consists of Langford and Colwood and the surrounding area, including four lakes, Thetis, Florence, Langford and Glen. It takes in about 12,000 acres.

The report recommends that bogs and marshes be left alone and development of landscapes with thin soils be avoided because of high social costs, such as sewage disposal.

The report warns that Langford Lake is in danger of becoming a cesspool.

The study conducted by Dr. Slavoj Eis, an environmentalist with the Pacific Forest Research Centre on Burnside Road, was requested by the Capital Regional District.

A total of 8,910 acres or 77.3 per cent of the study area is suitable for development, the 47-page report states.

The study breaks down the area into 11 landscape types, and recommends how the land can be developed.

Eis said there is more than sufficient suitable land for housing to accommodate a population of 54,000 as predicted by CRD for 1995. The present population is 22,000.

"There is enough suitable land for development without using sensitive areas which would lead to the downgrading of the environment and high social costs," he said.

He said no new development should be allowed on marine clay landscapes until better methods of sewage disposal are developed, or sewers with treatment plants are installed.

"At present, effluent discharge from the recent development above Esquimalt Lagoon is causing pollution of water in the lagoon and eventually will have to be cleaned up at great public expense," he said.

The best use for this type of landscape is as open space or greenbelt combined with multiple-use forestry.

Eis makes a special plea for Langford Lake.

He observed that only a quarter of its water volume is flushed during the winter and the lake already is showing signs of pollution.

"Without the concern of everybody living within its watershed, with the expected population growth, this lake is in real danger of becoming a cesspool," he stated.

He said Glen Lake and Florence Lake, which are flushed during the winter, should retain acceptable water quality as long as effluents are not permitted to enter the lakes or streams, and herbicides and insecticides are used with caution.

Eis said the quality of the water in Thetis Lake is excellent, but warned this could change rapidly if effluents are permitted to enter streams enptying into the lake.

"In my report I said about half the volume of water in Thetis is flushed out in winter," he said. "But I'm being conservative. I believe it is less than that. It would be a real tragedy if this lake became polluted."

Eis recommended against development on bogs.

He cited as an example the bog off Jacklin Road, near Glen Lake.

He said development on such a site would be costly and a continual source of trouble.

"During the winter, fens serve as flood control basins by storing water, thus slowing the stream flow and controlling the flow extremes," he explained. "To allow housing on such sites in to ask for trouble. Usually it is the taxpayer who has to pay the costs."

Because of the growing interest in nature, he said, these sites could be used for educational purposes.

"They are also important wildlife habitats and should be preserved wherever possible."

He suggested bogs close to built-up centres, could be excavated and flooded to form a recreational lake.

CRASH HURTS BIKER

A 32-year-old Esquimalt man is in satisfactory condition in Victoria General Hospital today recovering from injuries received in a two-vehicle accident Tuesday.

Norman Cox was riding his motorcycle on Gorge Road near the Gorge Road Hospital at about 4:30 p.m. when he collided with a car driven by Maureen Suzanne Nicholls, 29, of 3572 Elliston.

Nicholls was not injured.

The accident was one of more than a dozen in Greater Victoria Tuesday attributed to slippery road conditions.

Most were relatively minor. One other produced injuries when George McDowall, 50, of 2931 Westdowne Road was taken to Royal Jubilee Hospital with head cuts following a two-car collision at Richmond and Lansdowne 8:20 p.m. Tuesday.

MDowall was treated and released.

The driver of the other car, Bernard Potentier, 47, of 2928 Henderson was unhurt.

Diabetics' Sight Not Helped: MD

VANCOUVER (CP) — A specialist in diabetes-related eye problems said Tuesday a new artificial pancreas designed by a University of British Columbia researcher probably won't be of much benefit in preventing sight deterioration in diabetics.

Dr. William Ross, director of the retina service at St. Paul's Hospital, said the new device, designed to control blood-sugar levels and eliminate the need for insulin injections, probably won't make much difference to the sight deterioration symptomatic of diabetics.

Dr. Wah-Jun Tze said Tuesday his device has controlled sugar levels in rats. The artificial pancreas consists of concentric tubes, an outer one containing insulin-producing cells and an inner one through which blood circulates.

Dr. Tze said his invention avoids the rejection problems of implanting pancreas cells and reacts more precisely to body needs than insulin injections.

Dr. Ross said statistics have shown that approximately 50 per cent of diabetics show some retinal change after 15 years and after 25 years, 90 per cent have impaired vision.

He said that an as-yet undiscovered factor related to the disease causes the body's red blood cells to bunch together. The bunched red cells burst the blood vessels of the retina, causing hemorrhaging that leads to impaired sight and sometimes blindness.

"I don't think we can make the assumption that the artificial pancreas is going to remove this unknown agent," said Dr. Ross. "We know that insulin controls blood-sugar levels, but diabetic patients using it still get eye problems."

The artificial pancreas might control this factor, he said, "but it would take years of study to determine if it does."

Dr. Tze's device is about two inches in length and is spliced into a blood vessel with tubes.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

Two men charged with breaking and entering, with intent to commit theft, and possession of pethidine for the purpose of trafficking were remanded in custody until a bail hearing in Victoria provincial court next Tuesday.

Trevor Patrick Clanton, 20, of 9839 Fifth, Sidney, and Douglas James Pruden, 24, of 3134 Alder, Victoria, were charged in connection with a Jan. 7 break-in at the Sidney Pharmacy, 2416 Beacon, and with trafficking.

The pair requested an adjournment to seek counsel and consented to being remanded in custody until next Tuesday when the question of bail and election will be discussed before Judge William Ostler.

A man who failed to show up for a Sept. 21 trial received a total of 28 days in jail after pleading guilty to two charges before Ostler.

John Glenn, 40, also known as George Austin Grieves and William Walker, who said he was a Mayne Island fisherman, pleaded guilty to failing to appear and changed his plea to guilty on the original charge of wilful damage.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court Glenn originally pleaded not guilty to a Sept. 8 charge of breaking a window at 1150 Queens in Victoria and had a trial date set for Sept. 21.

Following the change of plea, Ostler was told that Glenn broke a window valued at $30, and was found by Victoria city police asleep on a stairwell.

A 30-year-old Canadian Forces seaman was remanded without plea on a charge of forcible seizure in connection with an incident earlier Tuesday involving a 16-year-old girl.

Defence lawyer Sheryl Dunn, who requested a no-publication ban on details of the incident, was granted a one-week remand for election and plea.

Robert Stewart Mitchell, who gave his address as the Jolly Knight Motel, 246 Gorge Road, was released until next Tuesday on the charge.

Two teenagers escaped jail terms on a joint charge of public mischief.

Michael Rowland Graff, 17, of 3864 Douglas, and Daniel John MacDonald, 18, of 750 Daisy, pleaded guilty Dec. 20 and were remanded to Tuesday for a pre-sentence report prior to sentence.

In addition, Graff pleaded guilty to leaving the scene of an accident and possession of stolen property.

Court was told Graff was the driver of a vehicle which struck a parked car and left the scene, later reporting the car stolen to Saanich police.

MacDonald, a passenger in Graff's vehicle, corroborated the story, but the pair admitted later that it was not true.

A search later of Graff's residence produced a set of scales which had been stolen from the Greater Victoria school board.

Graff was fined $50 for failing to remain at the scene of an accident and $75 for possession of stolen property, and was given a suspended sentence on the mischief charge. He was placed on six months' probation and ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work.

MacDonald received a conditional discharge with four-months probation.

A Wilkinson Road inmate received a further two months in prison after pleading guilty to being unlawfully at large between Oct. 6 and 8.

Alfred James Swartz, 19, was on parole at the time, court was told, but failed to report to the probation officer at Port Hardy as directed. He was sentenced to six months definite and 12 months indeterminate May 10, 1976, on a charge of breaking and entering in Chilliwack.

Motorist Wallace Charles, 24, of East Sooke Road, was fined $350 after pleading guilty to having a blood-alcohol content over .08 on Dec. 17.

Law of the Gun and the Fist Prevail in Belfast Jungle

By DEREK BROWN
The Manchester Guardian

BELFAST — Crime and punishment IRA style is once again giving extra work to Belfast hospitals. In the past six days, a dozen young men have been brought in with bullet wounds in the legs.

Although they rarely admit it, most if not all are victims of what passes for law and order in areas dominated by the Irish Republican Army.

For the extremist Provisionals — and to a lesser degree the official IRA — have resumed one of their more bizarre secondary campaigns against what their spokesmen choose to call "gangster elements" in Republican areas.

The targets are petty thieves, receivers of stolen property, and persistent vandals. Arrest, trial, and punishment are all administered, quickly and brutally, by active service units of the IRA.

The most common penalty is the kneecapping, which sounds a good deal more specific than it is. There is in fact a viciously ingenious sliding scale of punishments by shooting, ranging from a single shot through the fleshy part of the thigh, to the practice of shooting through both knee joints and both elbows. At the very top end of the scale is the "head job," which needs no further explanation, and at the bottom end there is the public humiliation of tarring and feathering.

There is nothing new in such savagery.

The IRA in its various forms has traditionally used kneecapping as a punishment for minor informers almost since the movement was born.

In the present phase of "the troubles" the system has crippled or scarred many hundreds of young men, and has been adopted with apparent relish by Protestant paramilitary groups.

The latest spate of punishment shootings is said by Provisional sources to have been provoked by a sudden rise in organized crime, particularly by children and young people.

The IRA has promised especially severe action against "fences" and their ilk and against parents who do not control their children.

On the basis, perhaps, that "it takes one to know one," the IRA has found little difficulty identifying criminals.

In the past six days seven men have been shot through the limbs, four more wounded men are strongly believed to be victims of punishment squads, and one further case is uncertain. Only one of the shootings was in a Protestant area.

On Saturday an army patrol interrupted a group of youths as they were tarring and feathering a 32-year-old woman in a block of flats near the city centre. She was said by Republicans to be engaged in criminal activity.

Although much of the recent comment by the IRA has been propagandist in tone and content, there is no doubt that they are trying to impose their own brand of justice on what even they would admit is a lawless community.

The Provisionals have repeatedly tried to take over police functions in matters ranging from makeshift speed limit signs to investigation of alleged drug abuses.

The Provisionals are particularly strong on the latter. The high proportion of pharmacies in the lists of bomb-damaged property is said to be the result of IRA orders to cut off the source of tranquillizers and pep pills which filter into the hands of children.

The Provisionals would like to revive a system on the lines of the Republican courts which all but supplanted British justice in Ireland in the early 1920's.

But until they win the popular support needed to make that possible, they will presumably continue to make the punishment fit not only the crime but the men administering it.

Elliott Heads Pensioner Group

Don Elliott has been elected president of the CN Pensioners Association, Branch 6, Vancouver Island.

Other elected officers are: George Irvine, first vice-president; Richard Greer, second vice-president; Larry Kirkham, secretary treasurer; Fred Atkinson, sick committee chairman; Fred Nichols, entertainment committee chairman; Tom Cooper, kitchen overseer and Stewart Pennell, doorkeeper.

SWEDISH KING ANGERS REDS

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The Communist Party, condemning the Swedish royal couple for frequenting "snob spots," has called for the abolition of the centuries-old monarchy because it glamorizes capitalism.

One Communist member of Parliament suggested that 30-year-old King Carl Gustaf should go job hunting.

"The king is a young man. I am sure there is a job for him somewhere," Nils Berndtson said.

The Communists, in their harshest parliamentary motion to date on the subject, did not mention King Carl Gustaf or Queen Silvia by name. But they indirectly criticized the couple's spectacular wedding last June.

"If two persons, for whom it has been possible to float around at international luxury and snob spots, intend to start living together, then the massive propaganda apparatus makes up modern Cinderella sagas and all fawning and cringing resources of a nation are mobilized," it said.

"The monarchy is a means of strengthening the most conservative ideals of the capitalistic society, ideals in conflict with every democratic way of thinking."

The annual motion was made public Tuesday after being presented in writing to Parliament Monday.

The royal family declined to comment on the Communists' move. "We do not comment on parliamentary motions, regardless of contents," court spokesman Jan Martensson said.

The royal household allowance was increased by $97,000 to $1.5 million in the budget presented to parliament Monday by Sweden's new non-socialist government.

U.S. Prices Up, But More Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unemployment in the United States declined to 7.9 per cent last month from 8.1, the government said today, but the good news was offset by another sharp jump in wholesale prices, particularly for food.

Coffee, pork and poultry costs were the chief ingredients in the biggest rise in farm and food prices in eight months and pushed over-all wholesale prices in the U.S. up nine-tenths of a per cent in December. Industrial price increases slowed, with natural gas costs turning down after rapidly increasing for several months.

December's unemployment decline from the year's highest level of 8.1 per cent in November brought some relief for Jimmy Carter as he prepares to assume the presidency. But the year-end rate was still one one per cent below the 1975 recession peak.

The report also heralded a full year of virtual stagnation on the American job market. The December rate was 0.1 per cent higher than last January.

President Gerald Ford previously predicted that unemployment would be cut below seven per cent in 1976. As a result, Carter has been cautious to promise no more than a 1.5 per cent decline in 1977.

Unemployment dipped to a 1976 low of 7.3 per cent last May, but those improvements were wiped out by July. Joblessness hovered between 7.8 per cent and 7.9 per cent for four months prior to November.

Combined with this grim news was another labor department report showing that wholesale prices rose 0.9 per cent in December, reflecting a double-digit annual rate.

Carter Says: 'I Am Ready'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In Washington today for his final pre-inaugural visit to the city that will soon be his home, Jimmy Carter says "I am ready" to assume the presidency next week.

Travelling from Plains, Ga., late Tuesday, Carter defended his economic package from criticism by the AFL-CIO and his appointment of Griffin Bell as attorney general-disgnate from attack by the NAACP.

The president-elect said a day-long meeting today with his top advisers and congressional leaders was in keeping with a campaign promise. He said "world trouble spots" would be discussed, and all concerned would have a "much clearer understanding" as a result.

"I'm looking forward to becoming president," Carter told reporters aboard his plane. "I am not nervous. I look forward to it with a great deal of anticipation. I think I have done my homework and I feel prepared for it as much as I can be. I am ready."

Responding to criticism by the AFL-CIO who felt his tax cut-jobs program was inadequate to cure the economic doldrums, Carter said: "I don't have any criticism to make of them. They wanted a $30 billion public works program. In my opinion it's not feasible."

Meanwhile, President Gerald Ford gives his final state of the Union speech tonight and aides said he would use the nationally televised farewell address to reaffirm his "faith in the American people and in American institutions."

But barring last-minute changes, they said, he will not outline any major new proposals or deal at length with two of the most controversial issues still before him — decontrol of gasoline prices and amnesty for Vietnam-era draft evaders and deserters.

Ford was to deliver the speech at 6 p.m. PST before a joint session of Congress.

GE TO REPAIR LEAKING OVENS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — General Electric has agreed to repair a potential radiation leakage problem in 36,000 microwave ovens already installed in homes across the country.

The U.S. food and drug administration announced Tuesday it was requiring the repair program — its largest ever involving microwave ovens — "because the door seals on these ovens can deteriorate with use, resulting in a leakage of microwave radiation above that permitted by FDA's strict safety standard."

The ovens involved are GE and Hotpoint "Versatronic" and "Cook Centre" combination thermal-microwave units made from November, 1973, through October, 1975.

Search for Tanker Abandoned

CRUISE SHIP STOPS DEAD

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — As the stricken cruise ship Monarch Star drifted about in tropical waters off the coast of Cuba today, its 391 passengers sailed for Haiti aboard a sister ship, Monarch Sun.

The 617-foot Star, which left Miami Sunday on a 14-day cruise, stopped dead with a pump problem early Tuesday, a U.S. Coast Guard spokesman said. The Sun, with its own 431 passengers, arrived at the site later in the day.

BOSTON (UPI) — All that seems to remain of the 642-foot tanker Grand Zenith, its 38 crewmen and 8.2 million gallons of oil are two orange life jackets, a mattress, a brown trunk — and a lot of questions.

The huge ship vanished Dec. 30 en route from England to Providence, R.I., after its captain radioed he was encountering heavy seas south of Nova Scotia. The U.S. Coast Guard gave up the search for the Taiwanese crew Tuesday.

At least 20 planes and a cutter participated in a nine-day search of 272,119 square miles of the North Atlantic, an area feared by mariners since the days of Columbus for its sudden, violent storms and even more sudden disappearances.

Three more storms have since hit the area, churning up 20- to 30-foot seas. The water temperature — 40 to 50 degrees — could kill an unprotected man in under an hour.

"We cannot say what happened," said Lt. Mike Calabro after the search was suspended.

"All we can say is . . . in the area that we searched, the possibility of something — or someone — being afloat is very slim."

Coast guard spokesman Richard Griggs was more blunt: "They don't really think there is much chance of survivors."

The coast guard was ready to cancel the search Monday, but exteded it one day when four orange objects resembling life jackets were spotted by a plane.

The cutter Dallas scoured the area Tuesday, but found nothing, and was recalled to end the search.

200-Mile Pollution Control Zone Eyed

Magnuson, expressing concern about the danger of a spill from tankers carrying Alaska oil through the Strait of Juan de Fuca, which divides British Columbia from Washington State, promised to introduce legislation on liability and compensation for spills and said he had instructed his committee staff to prepare more legislation strengthening rules for tanker navigation, construction and operation.

Senator Ted Stevens of Alaska suggested that Canada and the U.S. might co-operate on what he called a hemispheric problem.

"They owe us reciprocity," he said, criticizing the omission from Canada's Arctic legislation of a provision allowing U.S. claims for damage from spills spreading across the border.

U.S. legislation covering construction and operation of the Trans Alaska oil pipeline did include a clause allowing Canadians to claim damages, he said.

But, he added, Canada acted quickly to claim sovereignty over Arctic waters after the voyage of the icebreaker Manhattan through the Northwest Passage in the late 1960s. "We got that message," he said.

Stevens said that the Alaska tanker route should be operated under the best possible safety considerations, which would depend upon Canadian co-operation.

"I think Canada is going to co-operate. They're as much worried about this as we are," he added.

Magnuson was critical of existing traffic controls in the Strait of Juan de Fuca, citing two incidents in November when tankers used sea lanes designated for outbound traffic to enter the strait.

U.S. Coast Guard Commandant Admiral Owen Siler said improvements in the traffic control system for the strait are being planned, but the system is still voluntary, and cannot be made mandatory until an agreement is negotiated with Canada.

Siler said Canada has been most co-operative, but the negotiations, which are being conducted by the state department, had been slow.

Hollings, impatient with delays by state department negotiators in general, snorted: "For every solution they have a problem."

Siler said two new regulations for the Strait of Juan de Fuca, which the coast guard hopes it can implement shortly, will require that tankers carry proper charts and have officers who can speak English (one of the tankers involved in the November incidents was Chinese and did not have local charts), reassignment of radio frequencies to reduce congestion and a rule requiring coast guard permission before a tanker can get underway during poor visiblilty.

The hearings, which will continue today was prompted by the flood of tanker accidents, mainly over the holiday period, the worst of which was the grounding of the Argo Merchant, on December 15 off Nantucket Island, Mass., and subsequent spill which spread to the rich Georges Bank fishing grounds shared by Canada and the U.S.

"This country has just witnessed the worst rash of tanker accidents ever," Magnuson said. "On top of that, last year was the worst year in history for tanker losses. These ships seem to be going down everywhere.

"Those of us who have studied this area closely feel that the worst is yet to come."

EATING RIGHT

Candy Sales Rotten Idea

By RUTH FREMES and ZAK SABRY

It is not uncommon to have school children come to your door offering chocolate bars for sale. With an innocent (genuinely so), sweet and enthusiastic look, they tell you "it is for the Student Council in our school". Many of us pay them the dollar and take the chocolate bar. After all, it is for a good cause. Some make some gesture of pointing out that the chocolate bar is not part of their diet and they would rather just pay them the dollar, thus clearing their conscience by helping the Student Council without rotting their teeth. Our stand has been to turn the offer down, giving the poor startled-looking kids a long talk about how bad chocolate is for them and anyone else; but assuring them that we will send a donation to the Student Council. This usually gives us a chance to tell the Student Council, with a copy to the principal, what we think of their practice.

We don't know what the situation is like in other communities, but we have been hearing of more schools resorting to other ways to raise money for their schools than selling candy. We heard of those who make and sell candles around Christmas time. Some sell magazine subscriptions — we even know of a school that is selling boxes of citrus fruits. One University choir is selling cheese to raise money for its activities. These are all commendable efforts to get away from the traditional oversized candy bar.

Recently, we read of a new scheme that is emerging in the United States, and we most certainly hope that it will never make it into Canada. We are writing about it so that if it happens, we can react negatively and swiftly. The scheme was introduced by General Foods in the U.S. to promote Post breakfast cereals and Kool Aid drink mix. School students are encouraged to collect Post cereal boxtops and Kool Aid labels. These, then, may be traded by the school for sports equipment. The scheme pays the school 5c for each cereal boxtop or sweetened Kool Aid label. It does not pay any money for the unsweetened product.

An attorney with Consumers Union in the U.S. described the program as a "flagrant example of the outer limits of the exploitation of children." According to Consumer Union calculation, any student who met the requirements of the Kool Aid program would consume an extra 65 pounds of sugar in a six-month period.

The Consumers Union analysis of the General Foods' scheme shows that it is indeed costly. In a school of 750 students, parents would have to spend aobut $6,750 on cereal in order to get about $200 worth of sporting equipment. If each parent donated about a quarter to the school, they could buy the same equipment themselves.

We don't anticipate that General Foods in Canada (a company that has shown leadership in nutrition education), or any other Canadian company, would come up with such an exploitative scheme. But, the thought might give us cause to consider our attitude as parents, teachers and nutritionists towards such schemes, including the current practrice of selling candy for student councils.

Probably the worst thing we are dong to our kids by accepting the sale of candy to raise money for school activities is the endorsement that we give these products. After encouraging students to sell chocolate bars and rewarding those who sell the most (at least psychologically), we can't turn around and condemn these foods as "not good for you". The school and the parents and, indeed, society as a whole, are endorsing a poor eating habit for the future generation to follow. We are sacrificing our kids health in return for few-pennies worth of Student Council activities.

More positively, we can refuse to buy candy bars from neighbourhood kids, no mattr how heart-breaking it might be to turn them down. Take the name of the school and write the principal expressing your dismay that teachers in the school are not taking enough interest to counsel students for better eating habits. If you are a parent, raise the matter up in a Home-and-School meeting and suggest that parents do-and suggest that parents donate 50c each to aid Student Council activities. If the homes don't sanction such sales, the schools will soon get the message — although in our opinion, it's the schools which should provide leadership in these matters.

Beefeaters Will Love This Cut

Mary Moore

Hostesses of parties for twenty-five people and Media Club of Canada members and all the Beefeaters in Canada will be interested in today's subject — beef.

As some of you know I am the perennial social convenor of our branch of the Media Club. It fell to my lot to organize our Christmas party.

My sister-in-law, Wyn Clark, opened her home to 27 of us.

I roasted a boned out "inside ham" of beef weighing thirteen pounds and it was so tender and popular I have to pass on my exact method.

ROAST BEEF

One 13-lb. boned, rolled "inside ham" (see below) roast of beef, paprika.

NOTE: I asked my butcher to explain the term "inside ham." It is cut from what we know as round steak roast BUT the outside muscle, which is naturally tougher, is not included. What is included is the popular "eye of the round." When you ask your butcher to sell you this cut you can tell him exactly what you mean. My butcher wrapped mine in a thin layer of flank fat and then tied it. Mine came from a hind quarter which had been hung 17 days.

Sprinkletop of roast with paprika, place on rack in roaster, put meat thermometer at thickest part and put in cold oven, turn heat to 200 deg. Fahr. and roast (uncovered, NO water, NO basting) exactly 5 hours. The meat thermometer will register 140 deg. Fahr. It will be slightly pink at centre, with well done ends for those who prefer that.

Have your knife razor sharp for the carver; have your plates preheated; select a good-natured, fast-moving carver — and enjoy!

Clip this for your next gala party.

Best Ever Beef Stew

In the French tradition, a rich full flavor is achieved by long, slow cooking.

4 lbs. shoulder beef, cut into 2" cubes
Salt, freshly ground pepper
5 tablespoon vinegar
1 cup red wine
4 strips bacon, chopped
2 tbsp. thyme
Sprinkle of sugar
Sprinkle of flour
12 small onions
6 large carrots, cut into pieces size of the onions
4 4 garlic cloves
Piece of dry lemon rind
Bouquet garni of parsley sprig and bay leaf
1½ cups red wine

Trim excess fat from meat. Place in a bowl. Combine some salt, pepper, the vinegar and 1 cup red wine. Pour over meat and marinate in refrigerator for 3-4 hours or overnight, tossing occasionally.

In a large heavy bottomed oven pot or Dutch oven, saute bacon then add onions, carrots and garlic and saute a few minutes. Remove vegetables with a slatted spoon so as to leave pan drippings. Dry the meat and brown well in fat, a few pieces at the time. Sprinkle meat pieces with thyme as they brown. When meat is well browned, add sprinkle of sugar and stir: (this will brown the stew); then sprinkle a little flour into the fat and stir quickly. Add the marinade, 1½ cups red wine, vegetables and place herb bouquet of parsley sprig, bay leaf and lemon rind in centre. Set to boil and over tightly. Let cook in a moderate oven 5-6 hours, adding a little water if necessary. When about to serve, remove herb bunch. Clear all grease from the gravy, remove and separate meat and vegetables. Strain gravy. Arrange meat in a large deep plate, top with vegetables and pour the boiling sauce over all.

BEEF TIPS

BEEF ROULADES

Blade chuck steak can be substituted for round steak or rouladen. Choose a thin steak, cut it into pieces approximately 3"x4" (pieces do not have to be identical in size and shape). Dip meat into seasoned flour and pound with a meat mallet. You would do the same with round or rouladen and the blade-chuck is considerably less expensive.

BEEF WELLINGTON

Buy a 5th, 6th or 7th rib roast. This is often cheaper than the first five ribs. Remove the rib bones and the cap. The cap is the top layer of meat over the rib-eye. What is left is the rib-eye, a delicious tender cut that can be substituted for tenderloin in your favourite recipe for Beef Wellington. Cut the meat on the cap into small cubes for beef stroganoff or bourguignonne and use the meaty ribs in a barbecue sauce for a delicious dinner of beef ribs.

Muffins Belong in Everyday Meals hilda beastall

(This will be Hilda Beastall's last food-recipe column for the Times due to the pressure of other work. She has promised to reconsider and perhaps resume at a later date when she has caught up with things. Meanwhile, Hilda says, she will still attempt to keep up with answering questions from the faithful readers who call asking for advice).

Muffins have a place midway between bread and loaf cakes in everyday meals, yet are not fully accepted as basic food by many homemakers.

Made at home, of varying nutritious ingredients, a muffin may indeed have a more food value than a slice of whole wheat bread of equal weight.

The variety of ingredients in the different kinds of muffins will be especially appealing to older people who no longer need a huge appetite to keep them in good health, yet depend on high nutrition being in the food they consume.

Muffins take little time to put together, only 20 to 25 minutes to bake in an oven already heated for other baking. They keep fresh in a top-of-refrigerator freezer for two or three weeks.

Either one of the three recipes given today can be enjoyed at breakfast, lunch or supper. There is a minimum of sugar included since dried fruit is used in each recipe.

Soy and Rye Muffins

½ cup soy flour
½ cup dark rye flour
1 Tbsp. wheat germ
2 Tsp. brewers yeast (torula)
1½ tsp. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
1 Tbsp. brown sugar OR dark molasses
¼ cup small date pieces
¾ cup water
one-third cup powdered skim milk
2 Tbsp. soft margarine OR oil

Grease a set of 8 large muffin pans with plenty of cooking oil or soft margarine, leave margarine on counter to soften for use in recipe later.

Preheat oven to fairly hot 207 deg. C. while mixing muffins. Measure all dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Stir to mix.

Measure water and pour into centre of dry ingredients; add well softened margarine (or oil). Stir and mix quickly with spoon just to combine with as few strokes as possible.

Spoon into well greased muffin pans, about ¾ full.

Bake for 20 minutes, or until light brown. Makes 8 large muffins. They have a rich flavor and good texture.

By making two kinds of muffins at each baking, you have a constant change thus avoiding the boredom of fine foods which might occur in a small family of one or two.

Wheat Germ Muffins

½ cup wheat germ
¼ cup wheat germ "chunks"
1 and one-third cups unbleached flour
2½ tsp. baking powder
½ cup skim milk powder
½ tsp. salt
3 Tbsp. brown sugar
½ cup seedless raisins
1 cup water
1 small egg
¼ cup soft margarine OR oil

Preheat oven to fairly hot 207 deg. C

Well grease 12 medium or large muffin pans.

Measure dry ingredients into mixing bowl and stir.

Beat egg with water in small bowl; pour into centre of dry ingredients. Add well softened margarine.

Stir with spoon to mix without beating. Use as few strokes as possible. Muffin batter should be rough and lumpy.

Spoon into well greased muffin pans. Bake in preheated fairly hot oven 207 deg. C. for 20 minmutes or until lightly browned. Makes 12 large muffins.

When removed from oven, run a clean (or buttered) knife around the edge of each pan to loosen; turn muffins out at once on wire rack to cool; or upside down on plate if no rack.

Third in this trio of Muffins are Prune-Bran Muffins. Quite different to the other two, these are softer and moister, equally delicious, and needing refrigerating to prevent spoilage.

The bran used is the bulk kind in one-pound packages costing around 31 cents a pound.

If desired, freeze half the muffins as soon as cooled. They need only thawing to room temperature later for use, or they go into a fairly hot oven while still frozen to heat through. The same applies to all these muffins.

Prune Bran Muffins

¾ cup wholewheat flur
¼ cup soy flour
1 tsp. baking soda
1 tsp. salt
1½ cups wheat bran (bulk)
¾ cup chopped cooked prunes
1 egg
1 Tbsp. sugar
2 Tbsp. dark molasses
¾ cup skim milk from powder
3 Tbsp. soft margarin OR oil

Well grease 14 medium or larg muffin pans (they come in 6, 8, and 12-cup sets. Preheat oven to fairly hot 207 deg. C.

Measure dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Stir in prunes.

Beat egg in small bowl. Add sugar, molasses and milk.

Beat together to blend. Dump into centre of dry ingredients in bowl. Add well softened margarine or oil. Blend quickly with spoon; mixture should be still rough and lumpy.

Spoon into well greased muffin pans, fill about two-thirds full.

Bake in fairly hot oven 207 deg. C. for 20 minutes until lightly browned. Run knife around edges; turn out on wire rack.

If there are any secrets about muffin baking, they are to mix quickly and with as few strokes of the spoon as possible; and to have oven ready to put the pans in at once.

Karate-Chopping Japanese Catch British Hotel Hoods

MAIDENHEAD, England (UPI) — A group of angry Japanese tourists used karate chops to capture two suspected thieves, police said.

They said about 100 Japanese tourists had just returned to their hotel after a sightseeing trip to nearby Windsor Castle when they found several rooms ransacked.

Two men were seen running out of the hotel and a dozen Japanese gave chase and felled them with karate chops, police said.

The tourists then marched the suspects back to the hotel, where police arrested them.

MEATY RICE pie boasts economy and nutrition

Spanish Touch

Recipes which are attractive and delicious, as well as being good for you, are hard to find these days. When a recipe with these qualifications does come along, and is economical to prepare as well, you'll use it again and again for special occasions and family fare alike.

One such recipe is Meaty Spanish Rice Pie — an easy to prepare one-dish meal that sizzles with appetite appeal. The flavorful "crust" on this dish is made with ground beef, milk and onion. Corn flake cereal crumbs added to the beef mixture add extra flavor and nutrients, as well as hold the meat mixture together during baking. The filling is a combination of cooked rice, green peppers, chili powder and other seasonings. For extra goodness, shredded Cheddar cheese is sprinkled on top during the last few minutes of baking.

For a well-balanced dinner, serve wedges of this spicy main dish with a tossed green salad, a hot cooked vegetable and whole wheat bread or rolls. The dish can be made ahead and frozen, which makes it ideal for the homemaker in a hurry!

MEATY SPANISH RICE PIE

1¾ cups tomato sauce (15 oz. can)
1 cup water
½ cup uncooked regular rice
1½ teaspoons salt
1½ cups corn flakes cereal
½ cup milk
¼ chopped onion
1 lb. lean ground beef
2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper
¼ teaspoon chili powder
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon sugar
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese

1. Bring tomato sauce and water to a boil. Stir in rice and ½ teaspoon of the salt. Cover tightly and cook 15 minutes over low heat. Remove immediately.

2. While rice is cooking, measure corn flakes cereal. Crush to ¾ cup. In large mixing bowl, combine crushed cereal, milk, onion and the remaining 1 teaspoon salt. Add ground beef. Mix only until combined. Press mixture evenly around sides and in bottom of 9-inch pie pan to form meat pie shell. Set aside.

3. Stir green pepper, chili powder, pepper and sugar into rice mixture. Spoon into meat shell, spreading evenly.

4. Bake in oven at 350 deg. F. about 30 minutes or until meat pulls away from sides of pan. Remove from oven. Sprinkle with cheese. Return to oven and bake about 3 minutes longer or until cheese melts. Cut into wedges to serve.

Yield: 6 servings.

Paprika Adds Hungarian Touch

NEW YORK (NYT) — If the main dish of the meal is to be pork chops, there are two ways to cook them — fast and slow. If they are to be braised — that is browned and cooked slowly — the time element is not critical.

The following pork chops recipe is called hongroise because they contain paprika and, to a French mind, paprika is associated with Hungary. They fall into the "cooked quickly" category. The total cooking time is about 25 minutes for the chops, five minutes more for the sauce. Thus the chops should be cooked about half an hour before they are to be served. If they stand, they are more than apt to become tough and chewy.

The accompaniments for the chops include baked acorn squash, which requires 45 minutes of cooking and should, therefore, be placed in the oven early. And then there's a saute of Brussels sprouts. The cooking time for this varies — about 25 minutes — but the sprouts can be cooked, drained and set aside and then sauteed quickly in butter before serving.

A Boston lettuce salad with cheese, followed by sweetened orange sections, would be appropriate.

PORK CHOPS HONGROISE

4 loin pork chops, about two pounds salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 teaspoon paprika
2 teaspoons peanut, vegetable, or corn oil
¾ cup finely chopped onion
½ cup dry white wine
½ cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon imported prepared mustard, such as Dijon or Dusseldorf

1. Sprinkle the chops on both sides with salt, pepper and the paprika.

2. Heat the oil in a heavy skillet and add the chops. Cook about 10 minutes or until nicely browned on one side. Turn and cook 15 minutes longer. Pour off the fat.

3. Sprinkle the onion between the chops and cook briefly. Remove the chops to a warm platter. Add the wine to the skillet and cook, stirring, until the liquid is almost totally reduced. Add the cream and cook over high heat about five minutes. Remove from the heat and stir in the mustard. Serve the chops with the sauce spooned over.

Yield: 4 servings.

BAKED ACORN SQUASH

2 acorn squash
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons brown sugar
salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Preheat the oven to 400 degrees.

2. Split the squash in half. Using a spoon, scrape out and discard the seeds and fibres from the cavity. Cut off and discard a thin slice from the bottom of each squash half, so the squash will rest flat during baking.

3. Rub the cavity of each squash half with one-quarter of the butter, and sprinkle the cavities with equal amounts of brown sugar. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place on a baking dish and bake 40 to 45 minutes or until the flesh is tender.

Yield: 4 servings.

SAUTEED BRUSSELS SPROUTS

1 pint, about ¾ pound, Brussels sprouts
salt
1 tablespoon butter
freshly ground pepper to taste

1. Pull off and discard any tough outer leaves from the Brussels sprouts.

2. Trim the bottoms neatly. Cut a cross in the bottom of each.

3. Put the sprouts in enough boiling salted water to cover them. Let the water return to a boil, and simmer the vegetable about 20 to 25 minutes or until tender.

4. Heat the butter in a heavy skillet and add the sprouts. Sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste and cook quickly, shaking the skillet until the sprouts are golden brown all over. Serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

SPINACH 'N' CRAB SPREAD

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press

Cooks ask us for new recipes for spreads to offer with before-dinner drinks. They say they often serve cheese or tuna spreads; they want something "different."

Well, here's a recipe for a Crab and Spinach Spread that's deliciously new. It was sent by a friend who wrote: "I find it divine for holiday and all-through-the-winter entertaining. Because it can be put together at the last minute, it's easy to serve hot. The first time I made it I thought the green onion in it might be a little overpowering, but none of my guests agreed with me. So perhaps I was just sensitive to onion that day." When we tried this spread the first time, we served it hot; next time around, chilled. Our tasters were enthusiastic about it both ways. As to the amount of scallion, all our participants thought it just right.

CRAB SPINACH SPREAD

7½ ounce can or ½ pound frozen tendon-free king crab
10 ounce package frozen chopped spinach
Salt
1 tablespoon olive oil
½ cup finely chopped scallion green onion
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 tablespoons dry vermouth
2 tablespoons dry vermouth
⅓ cup grated Parmesan cheese
Freshly ground pepper to taste
¼ teaspoon dried crushed oregano
½ cup commercial sour cream
Crackers or sliced crusty rolls

Drain canned crab and slice the large pieces; drain and slice frozen crab. Cook spinach, using ¼ teaspoon salt, according to package directions; drain thoroughly. In an 8-inch skillet heat the oil; add scallion, garlic, crab and spinach and cook gently for a few minutes. Stir in vermouth, Parmesan, ¼ teaspoon salt, pepper and oregano; cook gently for a few minutes. Stir in sour cream and heat gently. Serve warm or chilled as a spread for crackers. Makes about 2 cups — enough for 6 to 8 tasters.

dear abby

Queen's Love Life Is Private Affair

DEAR ABBY: One of the girls I work with has fallen head over heels for a guy she couldn't know very well. Either that, or she's led a very sheltered life.

I've known this guy for years. He's a closet queen who uses girls as a cover-up.

I hate to see this girl get crazy about him. If he should go so far as to marry her, it can't last very long because he's the type who never stays with one lover very long, but needs a nice straight woman to be seen in public with.

Should I tell her what she's got herself mixed up with? Or let her keep going with him until he breaks her heart?—NAMELESS, PLEASE

DEAR NAMELESS: The guy could be bisexual, and it's also possible that he has decided to go the straight route. Since it's not possible for you to know what's in his head, I suggest you mind your own business. P.S. Maybe she knows all about him, but loves him anyway.

DEAR ABBY: We are a group of professional middle-class couples who often get together in each other's homes for good conversation. Each hostess serves something.

One of the couples serves on paper plates. Her excuse is that she works and must conserve her energy, and although most of us work we feel that this is her right. However, whether it's inside or a barbeque, she uses plastic forks, knives and spoons, which she washes and saves for the next party!

We have hinted that as long as she washes the plastic tableware for her next party she might as well use silverware, but she doesn't seem to understand.

Abby, if you've ever tried to eat borscht with a plastic spoon, or macaroni salad with a plastic fork, you'll know what we mean.

After her last party, our husbands told us not to accept another invitation to this couple's home. Our hints have done no good, and we like her too much to drop her. Any suggestions? — PLEASE, NO PLASTIC.

DEAR PLEASE: Quit hinting. Come right out and ask her to please save the plastic for picnics and to use silverware. And if that doesn't help, but you like her too much to drop her, bring your own silverware.

DEAR ABBY: I am 16 and unmarried. Just recently I gave my baby up for adoption. I loved that baby more than anything in the world, and it is why I didn't keep him.

I loved him enough to know that he would have a better home and a better chance in life with a mother and fateher, someone who is older and better able to care for him than I am.

I still have another year of high school. I would not really have been around long enough to give my son the love and care he deserves.

So when peple ask, "How could you give your baby away," my answer is, "Because I loved him."—UNSELFISH MOTHER

Chicken Curry

3 pound frying chicken, cut up
¼ cup flour
Salt and pepper
3 tablespoons butter
1 pound Spanish onion, peeled and quartered and cut in thin strips 2½ cups packed
2 teaspoons curry powder
¾ pound medium-small tart green apples, peeled and cored and thinly sliced (2 cups)
1 pound can tomatoes, undrained

Wash and thoroughly dry chicken; coat with about ½ of a mixture of the flour, 1 teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. In a large skillet in the hot butter brown chicken; remove. In the drippings in the skillet gently wilt the onion; stir in the remaining flour mixture, curry powder and 1½ teaspoons salt; add the apples and tomatoes and cook over low heat, breaking up with a wooden spoon, until apples soften; do not boil. Turn onion mixture into an oblong 3-quart baking dish (13½ by 8¾ by 1¾ inches) or similar utensil. Top with the chicken, skin side up. Bake, uncovered, in a preheated 350-degree oven until chicken is tender and crisp — about 45 minutes. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

Sweetbread Fondu

Wash sweetbreads and soak in cold, salted water to cover for ½ hour (½ tsp. salt to 2 cups water). Drain and parboil.

Cover with hot salted water (same proportions as before) and add 1 tbsp. vinegar or lemon juice. Simmer for approximately 15 minutes. Drain, cover with cold water and remove membranes and fat. Dry and cut into bite-size pieces.

Mix 1 beaten egg with a little milk, pepper and salt. Dip sweetbreads into egg mixture and then roll in bread crumbs till well coated.

Caesarean Caution Urged

BOSTON (UPI) — Physicians should test and not guess the development of an unborn child's lungs before birth by elective Caesarean section, an article in the prestigious New England Journal of Medicine says.

The article, written by Drs. Richard M Cowett and William Oh, concluded experienced doctors were no more accurate in guessing the gestational age of lung maturity of the unborn than rookies.

"A common impression among clinicians is that clinical experience may have an important role in the precision of fetal-age determination during pregnancy," the article said.

"Using the number of years in clinical practice as an indicator, we found that greater clinical experience did not improve the accuracy of assessing gestational age and fetal pulmonary maturity," the pair wrote in the magazine's November issue.

"It is reasonable to recommend that assessment of fetal lung maturity by measurement ... on amniotic fluid should precede the delivery of the infant by elective repeat Caesarean section and that in the presence of evidence of immature fetal lung, the delivery of the infant should be postponed," the doctors wrote.

your health

Lester L. Coleman, M.D.

Is there any way to avoid the painful blocked sensation in the ears while making a descent in an airplane? It happens to me only once in a while, but when it does it is dreadful.—Miss R.Y.

Dear Miss Y.:

Dear Miss Y.:

The blocked ear sensation you complain of can occur during ascent as well as at the time of descent even in pressurized cabins.

The mechanism of the ear is such that a normal eardrum is kept in balance by the amount of air that enters the outer ear and the air that enters the midle ear by way of the eustachian tubes leading to it from the nose.

In most instances, people who do not have this experience regularly can attribute it to a cold, an allergy, or a sinus infection. Children with large adenoids that block the eustachian tubes are more prone to the problem.

Nose and throat doctors suggest that a nasal spray be used before the plane takes off and again before it begins to make its descent, usually 30 minutes before the expected time of arrival. Chewing gum, forced yawning and swallowing can be helpful in preventing this painful blockage.

Generally an excellent rule is to try to avoid flying with an acute infection of the nose or throat.

I am a rather heavy drinker and have been told that I have chronic gastritis. Is alcohol the only cause of this stomach disesae?—Mr. C.N.

Dear Mr. C.N.:

As the name implies, chronic gastritis is an inflammation, irritation, and sometimes an infection of the lining of the stomach. It is not difficult for you to appreciate the pain and discomfort that would follow placing some ordinary alcohol on an open skin wound.

Translate this to the irritation alcohol can cause to the delicate lining of the stomach, which already is abnormally sensitive. Spicy foods, tobacco, excess coffee and tea, and some drugs are other causes for the gastritis and the distressing discomfort associated with it.

It may not be necessary to give up all of these "indulgences" forever. Yet it certainly would be wise to embark on a regime of eating bland food at regular intervals while avoiding the known reasons for the irritation of the stomach.

It must be remembered that gastritis in an early and simple form can be controlled. When neglected, this converts into a chronic state and invites complications that can be severe. Face the fact that you have a problem, and after confrontation, solve it rather than delay treating it.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Dear Lynn and Joel: More on roses ... We've been receiving many letters about roses, their growth and care. Everyone can enjoy beautiful roses. They are not difficult to grow. Here are some basic rules for rose culture direct from the American Rose Annual, 1953, which we uncovered at a garage sale. (This is the best place to find old plant books, written with old-fashioned, natural growing methods.)

So for all you rose fanciers and that's just about everyone:

Roses will grow best in slightly acid soils with a pH value of 6.0 to 6.5 well supplied with organic matter. Leaf mold, rotted cow manure, compost, peat moss are some of the more common types of organic materials. Follow planting instructions given with each purchase. Don't put a $2 plant in a 10-cent hole. Give roses plenty of room.

Roses do not like wet feet; provide good drainage. They need at least six to eight hours of sunlight a day. They must have air circulation. Feed often, not too much at a time. Stop feeding plants two months before dormancy in cold zones. Roses are woody plants and need plenty of water. Do not water too late in the afternoon so plants can dry off by night, nor at noon when the sun is hottest. Mulch is important to keep the ground cool and keep down weeds. Use one with some buoyancy so aeration taken place.

In zones where temperatures require winter protection hill up plants with soil six to eight inches around crown. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. Keep plants healthy by proper care; spray or dust for disease and insects as a precaution.

Here is a lovely poem also from the book:

A red rose grown in a garden fair.
The Master's hand had planter it there.
To be tended by two human hands
Until straight and tall the red rose stands.
Its green leaves shine in the morning dew
As it sends its sweet fragrance out to you.
There are other flowers in this garden fair,
But the tall red rose is the fairest there.

Pineapple Chicken

For use in an unglazed clay casserole.

8¼ ounce can sliced pineapple in heavy syrup
¼ cup soy sauce
1 tablespoon minced fresh ginger
½ teaspoon nutmeg
3 pound broiler-fryer, cut up with excess fat removed.

Submerge the top and bottom of a 3½-quart unglazed clay casserole in water for at least 15 minutes. Drain juice from pineapple into the empty damp casserole; stir in soy sauce, ginger and nutmeg. Add chicken, skin side up, and pineapple slices. Cover and place in a cold oven. Turn temperature control to 450 degrees and bake until tender — 45 minutes.

The chicken will not brown. The sauce will have a delicate flavor and be thin. Makes 4 servings.

Old Okra Best

HOUSTON (UPI) — Herman Kresse would like to do for the okra seed what George Washington Carver did for the peanut: convert a run-of-the-mill plant into a superfood.

"We humans are eating the wrong part of the okra plant to realize the most food potential from it," said Kresse, who hopes study of the plant will earn him University of Texas graduate degrees in community health.

"We eat the food pod when it's green and very young and the food value is very low comparatively," said Kreese, 47, a career chemist.

Kresse said study has shown mature okra pods, brittle, brown and up to a foot long, contain seeds bearing almost as much protein as soybeans, good vegetable oil, vitamins, minerals and fibre.

Vegetarianism No Laugh

tiny bennett

By TINY BENNETT

In movies, you can bet if a character is either a birdwatcher or a vegetarian, he or she will be an object of fun.

Being a birdwatcher I resent this cliche casting and while I am not a vegetarian by conviction, I am in agreement with many vegetarian principles on the basis that they usually deal with healthy eating habits.

Not every country has the range of foods from which we obtain a totally balanced diet. We get protein, extremely important as the building blocks for the body, from meats, fowl, fish, eggs and certain vegetable sources.

In some Third World countries, millions of people die each year from hunger through sheer lack of food. And in many other instances people suffer from deficiencies in their diet — again through a lack of the necessary food items.

Now there is a beef shortage expected in Canada this coming spring and there is a chance that beef and other meats may rise high enough in price as to make family food shopping difficult to budget. So it would be wise to look at some of the vegetarian foods and their values and that they offer us an alternative and perhaps superior diet at a lower market cost.

In the years to come, as the world population grows, food stocks will become shorter and the very strong possibility exists that even in affluent North America there might come a time when the line must be drawn against extending the grazing lands in favor of growing certain staples that can supply a greater volume of nutrient in less space.

China discovered the protein value of the soybean at least 2000 years before the birth of Christ. In a land lacking grazing facilities, it has been stated that the soybean has made it possible for China's survival.

For example, let's look at the meatless main dish that is wonderfully inexpensive to produce. It's a simple casserole that takes about one hour to produce from start to finish.

RICE AND SPINACH CASSEROLE

Put two cups of cooked brown rice into a large bowl, stir in one cup grated sharp cheese, a good old cheddar and add four beaten fresh eggs, four tablespoons chopped parsley, one teaspoon salt and stir to mix thoroughly.

Stir in a cello pack of spinach that has been washed, drained and chopped roughly and pour all into an oiled casserole dish.

Bake in a pre-heated 350 oven for 35 minutes and serve.

This dish includes protein, iron, vitamins and minerals combined with a most delicious and different taste sensation.

One of the best books that I have seen on natural, healthful foods with lots of vegetarian dishes, plus meat, poultry and bread-making is the RODALE COOKBOOK, by Nancy Albright, the Chef-Manager of Fitness House and the Rodale Press Dining Room.

Published by the Rodale Press Book Division, Pennsylvania, at $12.95, this is a very large and most complete book on the subject of healthful eating. Here is one dish from this book that has become a great favorite in my home.

CURRIED VEGETABLES

You will need one onion, chopped; two tablespoons vegetable oil; one small head of cauliflower, broken down into flowerets; one medium eggplant, peeled and cut into one-inch cubes; two green peppers, deseeded and cut into thin strips; four medium carrots, peeled only if very dirty, otherwise washed, topped and tailed and cut into thin slices; ½ pound green beans, broken in half — or use a 12-ounce pack of frozen French-style green beans; one teaspoon chili powder; one teaspoon cumin powder; ¾ teaspoon turmeric; ½ teaspoon cardomom powder; one bay leaf; ½ cup boiling ater; ½ cup tomato juice.

Sautee the chopped onion in the oil until yellow, add the rest of vegetables, spices and bay leaf and cook gently for five minutes, turning all over lightly so as not to bruise the vegetables. Add the boiling water and the tomato juice and cook uncovered until the vegetables are done but slightly crisp. Remove the bay leaf, correct the seasoning and serve.

This appears more complicated than it really is. In fact it is a very simple dish and I like to serve it with brown rice on the side. It serves six good appetites.

To get an understanding of costs in preparing a main-course vegetable dish against one that includes meat, you only need to look at the prices on the produce counter and compare them with the per-pound of meat, fish and fowl.

This curried vegetable dish costs under $2 even with its long list of ingredients and of course the vegetables may be varied according to what is plentiful and therefore inexpensive.

CREOLE EGGS

3 B.C. Fresh EGGS, hard-cooked, halved or quartered dash curry powder, to taste (optional)

dash pepper, to taste
1 19-oz. can tomatoes, chopped
3 c. hot cooked rice

In a large skillet over medium heat, in melted butter or margarine cook onion, green pepper, garlic, salt and spices for five minutes. Add tomatoes and eggs; simmer, covered for 10 minutes to heat eggs through. Serve over rice.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Preparation Time: 45 minutes total.

Food Processor Copy Can't Match Original

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times

NEW YORK (NYT) — The most significant and discussed kitchen item since the electric blender has been, of course, the Cuisinart food processor, a gadget that first whirled into the public consciousness about two and a half years ago.

Within recent months the most talked about, widely awaited new gadget is a rival of the Cuisinart, a food processor made in Japan but bearing the label of the American firm Farberware. Chief cause of the new interest is the price differential. The Cuisinart sells today for $225; the cost of the Farberware machine is $120.

Within the last few days I have had access to one of the first available Farberware machines and have conducted extensive tests — simultaneously operating the new machine with the older and more expensive one. The results and observations are as follows:

At first glance the two machines are physically comparable. The food containers, the blades that grind, slice, shred and so on and the actual sizes are almost identical. But as to quality of manufacture, power, sturdiness, time required for food processing and ability to perform under stress, the Cuisinart is unquestionably superior.

The less expensive machine will perform all the basic routines — shredding, grating, slicing and so on — adequately. On the whole the operations can be done with much greater speed and more neatly with the Cuisinart. In an experiment grating fresh horseradish, a somewhat tough root vegetable, the blades stalled when a certain downward pressure was exerted on the vegetable. The Cuisinart grated the horseradish flawlessly, without fault in function.

In preparing bread crumbs, to get them to a desired degree of fineness, the Cuisinart required 17 seconds; the Farberware, 30 to 40 seconds longer.

Perhaps the most laudable merit of a food processor is its ability to prepare mousses of fish, fowl, liver and so on. These are foods that formerly required, in a professional kitchen such as Le Pavillon where I worked as chef, several hours of sieving painstakingly by hand. I recently prepared two identical recipes for a fish mousse, using the two machines simultaneously. The Cuisinart pureed the mousse quickly and without interruption within a minute or so. The mousse mass tended to stall the blade of the Farberware at a certain point; it was necessary to stop and start, for fear of overstress and burning out the motor.

MARK TRAIL

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

In today's deal, which was played a few years ago in a National Championship event, our North player came up with a bid which, on the surface, appears to be out of this world. But a more thorough examination of the call reveals that it was a sound, logical bid.

NORTH
♠ Q J 5
♡ J 10 9 7 6 5 2
◇ J 8

WEST
♠ K 2
◇ A 10 9 4 2
♣ K Q 9 8 5 4

EAST
♠ A 8 7 6 4
◇ 6 5 3

SOUTH
♠ 10 9 3
♡ A K Q 8 4 3
◇ K Q 7

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	4 ♡	4 NT
6 ♣	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♣.

West's four-notrump call was a systemic bid, showing a good hand containing a minimum of 10 cards in the minor suits, with at least five diamonds and five clubs. It was, of course, a command to partner to bid his longer minor suit.

North now had in interesting problem. Normally, an opening bid of four in a suit guarantees at least a seven-card suit. Since North was looking at seven hearts, he knew that his partner couldn't have seven hearts. North concluded that South had to have a six-card suit. And, hence, both East and West were void of hearts!.

From North's point of view, he was certain that East would bid a slam in either clubs or diamonds. And with South making the normal lead of a top heart, declarer would get a "ruff and a sluff" at trick one: that is, he would trump the lead in one hand, and simultaneously discard a loser from the other hand. Thus the opening heart lead would give declarer a present of a trick.

So, trying to steer partner away from what had to be a costly opening heart lead, North bid six clubs! This bid had a dual objective: first it commanded a club lead (anything had to be better than a heart); and secondly, it might well keep East-West out of their best suit, clubs.

As can be observed, North's six-club bid did keep East-West out of a slam in clubs. And further, had North bid either five hearts, or abstained from bidding, East would surely have bid six clubs. With South opening a heart, dummy would trump as East discarded a diamond. East's only loser would now be a diamond.

At the doubled six-heart contract, South lost two spades, a diamond and a club, for a loss of 800 points. Had East purchased the contract for six clubs, he would have scored 1,370 points.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, January 13

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Spotlight on versatility, the way you utilize material at hand. Accent on taxes, mystery, money in connection with partner or mate. Dig deep for information — a pleasant surprise is due. You are capable now of striking pay dirt.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Emphasis on details associated with security, legalities, rights and permissions. Money affecting young persons is also in picture. Arrive at agreement with mate, partner, business associate. You have time on your side, but do begin "planting seeds."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Highlight service, family needs — and do somthing to "control" your own moods. Give logic a chance to compete with impulse. Ask questions, but do so with good humor. Member of opposite sex deserves an explanation for your recent eccentric decisions, actions. Admit it, please!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with creativity, imprinting of your style — and love. If married, reconciliation with mate is indicated. Married or single, you "rediscover" meaning of romance. Taurus, Libra persons could be in picture.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Slowdown will work to your advantage. Know it and shake off any tendency to brood, worry. Pisces individual confides in you. Be sympathetic, even generous — without becoming inextricably involved. Past mistake "comes back," and this gives you a chance for remedy, correction.

FUN WITH FIGURES

"I like your new tiled patio," said Pam. "That blue border 6 tiles wide all around a square of green tiles looks great. But what a chore with so many."

Cathy smiled. "I had lots of time and there were no problems," she replied. "You see, the tiles are square and all the same size. It did take a lot, just one green more than the blues."

How many in all?

New Blast at CIDA

OTTAWA — Canada's billion-dollar foreign aid program is under attack and there is mounting pressure for a full-scale inquiry into possible mismanagement of public funds.

The latest wave of criticism comes in the wake of charges by former Ontario MLA Morton Shulman that Canadian International Development Agency representatives in Haiti were spending money foolishly and not for the purposes for which it was intended.

Among Shulman's allegations are that the CIDA officials had bought a "yacht" and that more work had been done on their own headquarters than on the projects they were supposed to be building in the poverty-stricken Caribbean country.

Paul Gerin-Lajoie, president of the agency, told reporters Tuesday that the so-called yacht was a 30-foot open boat provided by the Haitian government to help CIDA workers reach parts of the project area inaccessible by road.

Charles Morrow, chief information officer for the agency, said later that one of the CIDA employees, an enthusiastic sailor, had also bought a boat, but with his own funds.

MDs ATTACKING LUNG FAILURE

MONTREAL (CP) — Two Montreal doctors are researching a new process which might be able to save the one third of adults who die of lung failure in hospital intensive-care wards.

Dr. John Hewson and Dr. Anthony Holland, anesthetists at Montreal General Hopital, affiliated with McGill University, have been experimenting since 1974 on a glucose-inhalation treatment for patients showing signs of lung collapse.

They believe their research is not being duplicated anywhere. If further research with animals is successful, they said in a recent interview, the process may be used on humans within two years.

In theory, the process is remarkably simple. Lung failure "is due in large part to decrease production of a substance called surfactant, which reduces the surface tension of the lungs," Dr. Hewson wrote in the monthly publication, Research McGill.

"Metabollic production of surfactant is in turn dependent on an adequate oxygen supply from one side of the lung membrane and an adequate "fuel" supply from the other, circulatory, side."

The fuel is glucose, or blood sugar, normally supplied though the arteries and capillaries leading into the lungs. But the lungs of an intensive-care patient admitted for shock or internal hemorrhaging may not receive enough glucose from the blood.

So the lungs will collapse if enough surfactant is not produced by the 50 million tiny air sacs which line the lungs and form the lung membrane.

Dutch Pilot 'Avoided' Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — A Dutch airline pilot said Tuesday his concern about the "quite serious situation" in Canadian airspace last June prompted him to take steps to reroute a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines flight through the United States.

John Ellison-Davis, a British-born pilot who has been with KLM since 1950, told the Federal Court of Canada that he judged Canadian air traffic control to be unreliable after landing at Toronto International Airport last June 22 during the nationwide air dispute.

Mr. Ellison-Davis said he telephoned KLM officials in Amsterdam and the airline agreed to reroute a flight from Toronto the following day through U.S. airspace.

The KLM pilot was appearing as a witness in a Federal Court hearing on contempt of court charges against the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association CALPA, association president Ken Maley, and two top CALPA officials who are Air Canada pilots, Norman Foster and Robert McKinnon.

Mr. Justice A. A. Cattnach said he feels there is no evidence to justify finding Mr. Foster in contempt of court.

U.K. Union Power Seen Canada Model

LONDON (CP) — Canadian Labor Minister John Munro maintains that Canada would benefit if Canadian unions had more strength.

Asked what Canada could learn from Britain's labor relations, Munro cited Tuesday the "monolithic" power of the British union movement as a model that would improve Canadian industrial relations.

He said in an interview that Canada had suffered from disunity and weakness in its labor organizations and renewed his call for closer ties among unions, management and the federal government.

But Munro acknowledged that unions are unpopular in Canada with some groups, and said the suggestion of increasing their power might be even more unpopular.

Despite the power of British unions, concentrated in the Trades Union Congress, and contrary to Britain's reputation as a land of strikes, this country has had far fewer strikes than Canada in the last year in proportion to population.

Munro was in London for a day, meeting British Employment Minister Albert Booth and attending a formal dinner in the financial district before flying home today.

His stop-over, which follows visits to West Germany and Israel, was shortened by a day so he could attend an Ottawa cabinet meeting Thursday.

He said his major interest throughout his tour has been the ways other countries have achieved co-operation in labor affairs.

West Germany, Israel and Britain all are marked by close links between unions and the government, even when labor parties are not in power.

No Meddling, Rossi Pledges

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — France is unlikely to embarrass Canada by trying to establish new relationships with Quebec, French Trade Minister Andre Rossi indicated Tuesday.

"France has no intention of changing its traditional position, which is not to intervene in the internal concerns of other countries," Rossi told a press conference.

He is the first senior French minister to visit Canada since the Parti Quebecois election vittory.

The French minister said he did not forsee any complications arising from the election of a separatist government in Quebec, but stressed that his visit was on economic matters, not political.

Rossi said there was no particular significance to the fact he had visited Ottawa before going on to Quebec to discuss matters that fall within provincial jurisdiction.

"It is just the way things were arranged," Rossi said.

The visit to Quebec, he said, was to deal with matters within provincial jurisdiction such as technical and cultural co-operation.

The France-Quebec relations are covered under an umbrella agreement between France and Canada.

The French trade minister said he had had two days of "frank and friendly discussions" with federal ministers and officials — including a session with Prime Minister Trudeau and several with Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jean Chretien.

He said Trudeau had expressed a concern that relations between France and Canada had not expanded as much as desired.

Rossi, who was accompanied by 10 senior trade officials, noted that while France and Canada are both among the 10 leading trading nations in the world, each exports less than one per cent of its foreign shipment to the other country.

He, and Canadian minister Jean Chretien, both expressed a desire to increase the figure to two per cent.

Rossi said that a considerable effort, a follow-up to the meeting of the Joint Economic Committee, is necessary to boost trade.

France stands second among European countries in investment in Canada, but it is a modest amount, Rossi added.

B.C. May Fight Tax Ease

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — The British Columbia Assessment Authority likely will appeal a Dec. 30 ruling by the provincial assessment appeal board that substantially reduced the 1976 assessment of the Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. sulphite pulp mill here.

Prince Rupert Mayor Peter Lester says the appeal board's ruling could create chaos in commercial and industrial assessment in the province and will have a significant impact on the economy of the north-coast port city.

The appeal was granted by the three-member board on the basis of a provincial pollution control board order in 1975 that the sulphite portion of the mill meet stringent environment standards.

CanCel directors subsequently decided to phase out the sulphite mill and appealed their 1976 assessment on the grounds of increased obsolescence of that portion of the mill.

W. M. Anderson of Maple Ridge, chairman of the appeal board, said the ruling ordered the provincial assessment authority to reduce the mill's assessment to allow for a one-year lifespan of the sulphite portion.

The sulphite mill was shut down in October and is currently being transformed into a kraft mill.

The B.C. government owns about 80 per cent of the mill and Lester says the operation is responsible for about one-third of Prince Rupert's general purpose and school tax levies.

The reduced assessment will lop about $748,000 off the company's tax bill to the city and Lester says that unless the B.C. Supreme Court overturns the assessment appeal board's ruling, the city will have to come up with the missing tax revenue for the 1977 taxation year.

The issue stems from legislation passed by the former New Democratic party government in 1974 that froze assessment in the province. Under a provision of the Revised Assessment Act, appeals were to be granted only if certain factors could be met such as zoning changes, new development and construction or physical changes such as sewer installation.

Lester said the appeal board went outside these concrete stipulations and made its ruling on an external factor — the economic viability of the mill, rather than property value or depreciation or other concrete factors.

"The board stretched the idea of new development from a concrete fact to an abstract term."

BAG OF CHEQUES LOST ON FLIGHT

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The RCMP, Loomis Armored Car Ltd. and CP Air are investigating the disappearance Dec. 21 of a courier bag containing an undetermined number of cheques.

A CP Air official said the bag, bearing the word "Loomis," was lost on a CP Air flight from Prince George to Vancouver.

Affected are four branches of the Bank of Nova Scotia and two branches of the Bank of Montreal, all in Prince George.

The lost cheques had been honored at the branches Dec. 21 and were being flown to Vancouver for routine daily processing at data centres.

The loss means the six banks have to reconstruct chequing activities for that day.

Bank officials declines to reveal the total value of cheques cashed Dec. 21 and refused to estimate what the loss will cost in man hours.

Ben's Beer Flows Again

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Ben Ginter said Monday that beer bottling will begin at his brewery here next week.

In an interview from Vancouver, he said bottled beer in storage in the brewery is getting too old to be sold.

"But the brew in the vats is just right."

The brewery still is under the management of receiver Harold Sigurdson and Ginter said that there is no immediate prospect for selling the property.

Trebell Remanded

VANCOUVER (CP) — Frank D. Trebell, a former president of the Bank of British Columbia, was remanded Tuesday to Feb. 28 on 30 charges of theft, fraud and conspiracy in the alleged misuse of $11.8 million in mutual funds.

The charges — 22 of theft, seven of fraud, and one of conspiracy — stem from 17 transactions which occurred in B.C. and Alberta between March, 1973 and June 1975.

R. D. Plommer, a lawyer representing the BC. superintendent of brokers, appeared as special crown counsel in the case Tuesday.

WINNER JUST WANTS A NORMAL LIFE

CARDIFF, Wales — Islwyn Jones was overwhelmed when he won $85,224 on a soccer pool competition, so he disappeared from his home in the village of Llangennech, near Llanelli.

He came out of hiding a week after the win to tell a news conference he would have been happier if he had won "about 50,000 pounds ($85,000)."

"At the moment, the only thing the money means to me is that my mother can be comfortable for the rest of her life," Islwyn said. "And all I want is a chance to lead a normal life."

The 42-year-old bachelor, who worked as a fitter at the local coal mine, said he had no girl friends, was burning all begging letters and was not interested in business offers.

Accused Of Fraud, He Wants Death . . .

EDMONTON (CP) — An elderly man facing a charge of fraud in Alberta Supreme Court asked that he be given the death penalty.

"I have no other reason for living," Eugene Wood told Mr. Justice Michael O'Byrne.

The dishevelled, grey-haired man standing erect in the prisoner's box faced one charge of fraud.

He elected trial by judge and jury and his case was set over until April 4 when he asked that the trial be set aside because "I request the death penalty."

Mr. Justice O'Byrne leaned forward in his chair and said: "But you're presumed innocent."

"In this case it's irrelevant," Wood said. "I've been put in a cage like an animal."

He said he would show the judge some hospital reports and then said: "I feel I should have the dignity of dying like a gentleman."

Wood told Mr. justice O'Byrne that he was an American and, because of that fact, he felt it was impossible to get an unprejudiced trial in an Alberta court.

The man's age and his hometown were unavailable.

8% Tax Hike Seen

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mayor Jack Volrich said Monday he hopes to limit this year's property tax increases to less than eight per cent. The mayor said the limit depends on the provincial government maintaining its level of grants to the city.

Mother Wants Her Snatched Children

CALGARY — A Calgary — area woman says she has not received any word about her two daughters who are being held in Colombia since her brother was expelled from that South American country for trying to bring them home.

Patricia Ramos said her daughters, Rachel, 6, and Kiely, 5, were spending Christmas with their father Ivan Ramos in Sincelejo, Colombia, accompanied by their uncle Rick English.

Mrs. Ramos said her ex-husband decided to keep the children and told English he would not let them return home to Cremona, about 50 miles northwest of here.

She said English managed to get the children out of Ramos' house and took them to the airport intending to fly home.

Before he could board the plane, he was seized by Colombian police, ordered out of the country and the children were returned to their father, Ramos said.

The Department of External Affairs is trying to help Mrs. Ramos get her children back, but officials are not optimistic.

"We really can't prevent, in very many cases, this kind of thing from going on," David MacNaughton, executive assistant to External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson, said in a telephone interview from Ottawa.

He said countries don't usually recognize each other's divorce and custody laws and "it's very difficult for us to do anything."

But if Colombian officials admit they acted on behalf of Ramos when they took the children at the airport, it could become a diplomatic matter in which External Affairs may have some room for negotiation, MacNaughton said.

NO FREEDOM FOR LISA

WINNIPEG (CP) — Lisa, a 125-pound lioness that her owner claims is as harmless as a kitten, won't be allowed to roam freely in Winnipeg any more.

Ivan Lambert, who keeps Lisa at his Winnipeg home, said the 14-month-old lioness will be on a leash when he takes her out for a stroll.

"I have to be realistic," he said, adding that recent criticisms have made him aware that he must respect other people's concerns. "She's a lion."

Police have asked Lambert to get rid of the big cat within the next couple of weeks or else have it "properly secured," probably in a zoo.

"I can handle her on a leash," Lambert, a 200-pound truck driver who has owned the lioness since August, said.

A woman complained to police after she was surprised by Lisa on the banks of the Seine River. She said children who were playing nearby were startled when the lioness, who was not on a leash, came bounding into view.

Ray Wilson, deputy police chief, said he has evidence from three veterinary specialists that the animal could be dangerous to the public.

"We're dealing with a wild animal and you never know when it's going to attack someone," Wilson said. "We have to protect the public."

Lambert, who keeps Lisa chained in his garage or basement, said he makes sure that people who play with her are responsible and know how to react.

In the Mail For 60 Years

STILL HITTING the ski slopes at the age of 80 is Harold Croft of Alcove, Que., north of Ottawa. A retired CPR agent, he didn't even take up skiing until the age of 43 — a time in life when most people are thinking of giving up the sport.

KOKSIJDE, Belgium — Julia Clinckemaillie received a letter Tuesday mailed in Britain by her husband, Achilles, during the First World War. The local mailman said Clinckemaillie incorrectly addressed the note. It landed in France, where it was shunted about for more than 60 years, judging from the string of postmarks. Clinkemaillie died more than 30 years ago.

HOLLYWOOD — Count Basie, who suffered a heart attack while playing an engagement at Disneyland last Labor Day, is taking his band on tour again. "It was just like starting over again, all those years ago," Basie, 72, said after his first concert at a local college.

AYLESBURY, England — Rolling Stone Keith Richard, accused of two drug offences, did not get "a fair crack of the whip" from police, Richard's lawyer said Tuesday. Sir Peter Rawlenson, lawyer for the rock group's lead guitarist, told a packed courtroom here that after Richard's Bentley crashed, Richard was singled out by the police, who did not even take the names, addresses or any statements from either of the girls or the other man in the car.

ATLANTA, Ga. — Mrs. Martin Luther King Jr. says she thinks Jimmie Carter will create "a positive kind of climate" in which minorities can grow more quickly toward equality. She also predicts that her late husband's birthday — Jan. 15 — will be declared a U.S. national holiday under the Carter administration.

NEW YORK — A man without home or family and suffering gangrene which doctors say will probably kill him has been declared mentally competent to reject a life-saving amputation of part of his right leg and left foot. State supreme court justice Hilda Schwartz ruled that Otis Simmons, 58, is rational and within his rights to reject the operation, despite testimony by doctors that he will probably die as a result and a psychiatrist's report that he is mentally incompetent. Simmons says he can cure himself. She noted that Simmons was "quiet, composed and observant" during a hearing.

Hallyday Faces Tax Charges

PARIS — French rock star Johnny Hallyday will go on trial in Paris next month on tax evasion charges.

Hallyday, 33, is accused of failing to declare earnings from summer concerts in 1971 and 1972. Sources said the sums involved total $510,000.

Hallyday is the second French singer to face tax problems in the last few months. Charles Aznavour was charged with tax evasion in December.

Shaking All Over . . .

ATLANTIC CITY — With her feet swollen and her eyes heavy with fatique, Vikki Canale stopped her marathon belly dancing, but not without setting s new world record of 66 hours and 40 minutes.

The 32-year-old mother of three from Lansdowne, Pa., quit Tuesday morning and went into seclusion to get some shut-eye.

She said she began hallucinating during the last 40 minutes of dancing.

"I didn't know where I was," she said. "I thought I was in a fixed-up garage or in prison. Sometimes I thought was just walking, walking and walking on a rug without going anywhere."

The old continuous belly dancing record was 38 hours and 23 minutes.

Lawson's Margin Cut

LAWSON
. . . Teamsters' choice

VANCOUVER (CP) — Senator Ed Lawson won re-election as a trustee of Teamsters Local 213 by a reduced margin Tuesday but the head of an opposition slate won the key position of secretary-treasurer of the 7,000-member local.

Jack Vlahovic, who lead a campaign to oust incumbent executive members associated with Lawson, upset incumbent Secretary-Treasurer Al Medly 1,320 votes to 1,240.

Four executive posts and three trustee positions were at stake. The newly-elected executives of the Teamsters' four western locals then elected a regional council which also has four executive positions and three trusteeships.

Lawson, who sits in the senate as an independent, topped the poll for trustees in Local 213. He was then returned by acclamation as president of the regional body, Joint Council 36.

Vlahovic's slate said Lawson was unable to properly attend to union business because he held four union posts in addition to his senate duties.

Vlahovic said Lawson was paid $150,000 a year for his various jobs. The senator said he earned less than $150,000 but did not say exactly how much less.

Two other members of the Vlahovic slate were elected by Local 213, one as president and the other as a trustee. Vlahovic also won a trustee position on the joint council.

Ison Says Williams Created WCB Woes by Firing Him

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams has only himself to blame for his continued inability to find a new chairman of the Workers' Compensation Board, says Terry Ison, former board chairman.

Ison said in a telephone interview Monday Williams created the problem by firing him a year ago — five months before his previously-announced resignation was to take effect.

Ison's dismissal was one of Williams' first moves as Labor Minister and the post is still vacant.

Williams said this week capable individuals are turning down offers of the job because they believe it has become too political and too controversial.

Ison said, "the public controversy is one of his own creation and his difficulty in finding a chairman is also of his own creation."

He said there would have been no controversy and an orderly changeover between chairmen would have been possible if Williams had enabled him to finish his term.

Letters written by Ison to Williams and B.C. Employers' Council President Bill Hamilton following his firing show that the former chairman predicted the problems that would ensue at the compensation board as a result of Williams' action.

Ison was fired without advance notice on Jan. 27 last year. He had previously submitted his resignation Dec. 12 —one day after the NDP government was defeated at the polls. The resignation was effective June 30, 1975.

In a letter to Hamilton dated May 22, Ison said: "I do not believe that in the 60-year history of the board any chairman has been treated so disgracefully."

He continued: "When I resigned, I gave the minister proper notice, sufficient to enable a successor to be found in good time and to enable an orderly changeover to take place."

JORDAN RESIGNS

Pat Jordan, Social Credit MLA for North Okanagan, resigned her position as party caucus chairman today.

Mrs. Jordan said she took the action because she feels the position of caucus chairman is one that should be rotated among party members. She has held the position for one year.

"There has been a tendency in all governments to elect a chairman who works hard the first year and then settles into a comfortable role," she said. "And I think it will augur well for our caucus to rotate our chairman."

East Germany Halts Travel

By MICHAEL GETLER
Washington Post

BONN, West Germany — The East German government Tuesday stationed armed security police in front of the West German liaison office in East Berlin in a dramatic new move by the Communist regime to stop its own citizens from applying for permission to leave for the West.

The East German action seemed clearly to be part of a spreading crackdown against a portion of the general population that in the past several months has shown a previously rare willingness to demand more personal freedom and the right to emigrate.

According to Western estimates, some 10,000 or more East Germans, beginning roughly last spring, have turned up at the West German mission in the Communist sector of Berlin to inquire about emigration.

The growing number of applicants — only a handful of which were actually allowed to leave quietly last year — has become a serious and embarrassing problem for the ruling Socialist Unity party, especially in recent months as news of the flow of applicants has become known in the West.

In Bonn, the West German government Tuesday lodged a swift and strong complaint, describing the Eastern action as "very serious."

Bonn's representative to East Germany said the sealing off of the West's mission in the East to East German citizens was the most serious hindrance to the mission's work since it was set up in 1974 after the two German states established relations in 1972 .U.S and other Western officials also voiced concern privately over the move since it fell into a pattern that suggests continuing hardening of East German policies toward West Germany in particular..

West Germany's representative in East Berlin claimed the action was "not reconcilable" with the provisions of the 1975 Helsinki Agreement on European Security and Co-operation in which 35 nations, including East Germany, pledged to improve human contacts between East and West and greater freedom of movement.

It is that portion of the Helsinki accords, plus United Nations resolutions on human rights, that is being cited by many of the East Germans trying to get out.

Until Tuesday, East Germans could go unimpeded to the West German mission in East Berlin.

In recent weeks, however, the East German government began trying to deter people from even applying for emigration. There were scores of reports about people losing jobs after their applications had started to be processed. Last month, there were also sporadic "identification checks" by police of people leaving the west German offices in East, allegedly to make sure the west was not helping any "criminals" get out.

Tuesday's action, for the first time, actually denies East Germans entrance to the building. The East German government says it is doing this under a 1963 order that supposedly requires East German citizens who want to contact foreign missions to first get permission from the East German foreign ministry.

In front of the West German mission, beginning at 8 a.m. Tuesday, two armed guards were posted and three others were on patrol. Across the street were other plain-clothes security officials. Civilians approaching the building were stopped if they were East Germans and told they needed permission to enter.

Diplomatic sources elsewhere in East Berlin said no restrictions or identification requirements were placed on other embassies there, though there has always been a guard on duty at many embassy entrances.

West Germans in East Berlin and other foreigners were being allowed to enter the West German mission unimpeded.

The East German action comes against a backdrop of growing restiveness, including protest by dissident intellectuals, in several East European countries, including Poland and Czechoslovakia.

The action also fits into a pattern of moves that several governments are now taking to try and put down this dissidence.

Gov't Won't Intervene In Hydro Hikes: Davis

Energy Minister Jack Davis said Tuesday the government will not intervene in a recently announced decision by British Columbia Hydro to increase electricity and natural gas rates.

The Crown corporation announced last Thursday that an average residential user's rate would be up by $31 a year for power and $36 for heat.

Premier Bill Bennett had said that a public utilities commission might be set up to oversee rate increases by Crown corporations, but Davis said in an interview that the Hydro increases will go through without governmemnt intervention.

"There's a tendency towards the ridiculous here," said the minister. "Do we set up yet another public body to review what a public body is doing?"

Davis added that there is a need for closer scrutiny of the corporations, coupled with more checks and balances.

Davis also said that the rest of Canada should get the same benefits on home insulation the federal government is offering two eastern provinces.

He said the federal government recently announced it will subsidized homeowners in Prince Edward Island and Nova Scotia who want to insulate their homes.

The minister said the two provinces are getting the special treatment because they rely heavily on costly, oil-powered plants for generating electricity. But he said British Columbians are paying an additional 10 cents a gallon on gasoline to equate prices on oil products across the country.

He said if the federal government is going to give grants to people to insulate their homes it should be a national program. He intends to pursue the matter with the federal government.

Mining Incentives Planned by Chabot

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mines Minister James Chabot said Tuesday the government will introduce measures in the coming session of the legislature to stimulate mine development.

In a speech to the British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines, Chabot said the incentives would encourage expansion in the industry "with a feeling of approval and appreciation by the taxpayer that mining brings benefits to the people of B.C."

The minister did not spell out the proposed changes but said the government is reviewing the rights of mineral claim owners with holdings in provincial parks and is planning adjustments to methods of staking claims.

"The terms and conditions under which the rights to minerals are held and under which mineral deposits are brought into production will be clarified to provide the stability on which the industry depends for raising capital," he said.

Chabot said new programs will be initiated in the areas of mine reclamation, energy resource evaluation and prospectors' assistance.

8. For the purposes of subsection (7) of section 786 of the Municipal Act, the Inspector of Municipalities may establish the amount of debt that may be incurred for this function.

Autoplan Insurance Safe Driving Discount

You will receive a 17.5% discount on your 1977/78 Autoplan Insurance if you qualify

To qualify, your driving record must be free of blameworthy* claims during the period October 1, 1975 to September 30, 1976. The discount will automatically be shown on your Autoplan insurance and Motor Vehicle Licence Renewal Form, which you will receive by mail. If you do not receive a renewal form in the mail take your current 1976/77 Certificate of Insurance to any Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office.

CHECK THE RENEWAL FORM

If the discount is not shown and you believe you qualify, discuss it with your Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office, when you renew your insurance and motor vehicle licence. Do not write on the form itself. If you wish to make any changes, please record them on a separate piece of paper and present them to your agent when you renew.

In addition to the 17.5% Safe Driving Discount, single male drivers under 25 who qualify will also receive a Safe Driving Grant equal to 25% of their 1976/77 Autoplan insurance premium.

However, this special grant to single male drivers under 25 will be by separate cheque, and must be applied for. Applications for the Single Male Drivers Under 25 Grant must be completed by April 1, 1977. They must be mailed to the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, P.O. Box 5050, Vancouver, B.C. V6B 4T4.

A single male driver under 25 will qualify if:

Sometime since March 1, 1976, a Certificate of Insurance was issued in any of the rate classes 04, 14, 204, or 214 for the vehicle of which he was the owner or principal operator.

As the owner or principal operator he has accumulated not more than five penalty points on his driver's licence since January 1, 1976.

Since that date the insured vehicle has not been involved in a blameworthy* claim.

And the vehicle was not used for commercial delivery purposes nor was part of a fleet.

If you are a single male driver under 25 and you did not receive an application form in the mail, you can get one from any convenient Motor Vehicle Branch office.

A blameworthy claim is one where the driver, (no matter who was driving), was responsible to any extent for causing bodily injury, property damage, or collision damage and for which a claim or loss has been paid by the Corporation. It should be noted, however, that any hit-and-run collision claim settlement is not classified as a blameworthy claim.*

Public Liability and Property Damage $300,000 inclusive limits. Collision $200 deductible. Comprehensive $50 deductible.

Ferry Data Proves Dip

Traffic statistics released by B.C. Ferries prove beyond any doubt the doubling of the ferry rates June 1 was solely responsible for reduced tourist traffic in Victoria last year, the Chamber of Commerce says.

Chamber president Alan Emery said today the trend from January through May 1976 showed a steady increase in traffic, but after June 1, ferry usage dropped an average of 25 per cent over the rest of the year.

"While the government claimed the U.S. Bicentennial, poor weather and a general economic belt-tightening were partly to blame, we maintained steadfastly from the day the rates were doubled, that was the sole reason for the decline," Emery said.

The statistics show vehicle traffic last year was 14.6 per cent below 1975 while passenger traffic dropped 12.5 per cent.

The number of vehicles dropped from 2,309,799 in 1975 to 1,971,734 while the passenger total dropped from 3,514,674 to 2,293,567 — a dip of 834,123 persons.

The table below shows the month-by-month traffic during the year.

Al Frame, president of the Victoria Visitors Information Centre, said the figures showing the marked drop in ferry traffic after June 1 are nothing new to him.

"They prove just what we've been saying all along." He added that the bureau is still pushing for reductions for foot passengers — a move also being pursued by Charles Gallagher, general manager of the ferry fleet.

Gallagher said he would make recommendations concerning foot-passenger fare reductions during off-peak periods when the new board of directors of the B.C. Ferry Corporation meets in the next few weeks.

Mrs. B. Egan of 1720 Sprucewood and S. W. Rohr of 1520 Point St. both turned in correct answers and will split the $550 prize receiving $225 each.

Judging of the contest, delayed a week by the mails, was completed just before noon today, too late for comments from the lucky winners. Solution to the puzzle will be published in tomorrow's Times and prize for the new puzzle in Friday's Prevue section starts at $100.

Bennett Orders Trading Probe

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

A full judicial inquiry into the stock trading activities of two natural gas and land acquisitions in the Grizzly Valley gas field area will begin nex tweek.

Premier Bill Bennett announced late Tuesday that Mr. Justice Walter Kirke Smith of the B.C. Supreme Court has been appointed commissioner in charge of the probe.

He will investigate whether anyone made use of inside government information to deal in stocks of Quasar and Cheyenne petroleum companies or in land in the area 75 miles southwest of Chetwynd.

Only Monday, Bennett said there was no need for an inquiry and said the attorney-general's investigation into the trading patterns of the two companies was enough.

But Tuesday, after three more people had lost their government jobs because of the affair, he changed his mind.

"It is a sensitive enough area that the public has a right to know," Bennett said.

"I want to find any and all people who abused the public's trust."

The attorney-general's investigation launched Dec. 16 under the Securities Act will continue in conjunction with Smith's public inquiry.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said today he is pleased with the inquiry which the opposition has been asking for two weeks, but is curious about "what new evidence changed the premier's mind in 24 hours."

Bennett revealed for the first time Tuesday that it was Vancouver South Social Credit MLA Stephen Rogers who first told Attorney-General Garde Gardom of "alleged stock purchases by a person or persons with confidential information relating to the proposed pipeline."

Bennett's version of the sequence of events leading up to the attorney-general's investigation differs from the version revealed earlier by Economic Development Minister Don Phillips.

Bennett said Rogers told Gardom of the alleged misuse of public information shortly after government approval of the $100 million Grizzly Valley pipeline was announced Dec. 10.

Bennett said Gardom then launched his investigation and told Phillips that his special adviser Arthur Weeks, owned shares in Cheyenne Petroleum, one of the companies which will benefit from the pipeline.

Aftter Phillips received the information from the attorney-general, he fired Weeks Dec. 21.

Both Weeks and Phillips said earlier that Phillips was first informed of Weeks' actions by Weeks himself on Dec. 19.

Mr. Justice Smith said today he will finish the court sittings he has this week and will start preparations for his inquiry next week.

He said he expects the inquiry will be public and that it will be held in Vancouver.

The terms of reference given the judge call for an inquiry to find out — in addition to the share trading — "whether any person or corporation has purchased or sold property, real or personal, as a result of confidential information which they may have received prior to the 10th day of December,

POLICE AWED BY VAULT LOOT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Awed police officers waded knee-deep Tuesday in millions of dollars in cash, jewels and gold, scattered on the floor of a Vancouver vault in the course of what some detectives say could be the world's biggest robbery.

The carefully-executed raid was foiled by a Vancouver International Airport baggage handler who became suspicious Monday when he found a suitcase almost too heavy to lift. When a supervisor opened the bag he found a fortune in bullion, cash and jewels.

The RCMP were called in, found eight more stuffed suitcases and arrested three suspects before the raid on the vault had been reported.

Police are still counting the loot, stolen from 2,500 safety deposit boxes in a downtown vault. They estimate the robbery netted "tens of millions," which would eclipse the $10 million in jewels, gold bars, cash and securities stolen last year at Nice, France.

"I was knee-deep in valuables," said Jeff Hilton of the police crime laboratory. "It was incredible."

Police said they suspect a number of boxholders will be reluctant to claim their valuables for fear of running into income tax investigations.

Police also arrested two suspects in Winnipeg who had left Vancouver on a Toronto flight that was forced back to Winnipeg by bad weather. The two were returned to Vancouver Tuesday night.

Police said thieves entered the building containing the vault sometime after closing Friday through a second-floor window near a fire escape.

The thieves opened a ground-floor door to an adjoining lane and moved some equipment to the basement. There they attacked the rear wall of the 40-by-15-foot vault which houses 5,000 deposit boxes.

"They drilled through 24 inches of concrete with diamond core drills and burned through 3½ inches of steel with a thermal lance," said Hilton. "The thermal lance causes concrete to flow like lava."

The thieves cut a hole two feet in diameter, levered out the concrete plug in the middle and clambered into the vault. Inside, they broke open about half the boxes, taking only the most valuable items, cash and gold. Before leaving, they hid four empty oxygen and acetylene tanks used for the cutting torch.

The vault had no alarm and the company had not insured the vault's contents.

"They were counting on the thickness of the wall," said one detective.

AECL Agent's Name Withheld?

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC says Canadian authoritis are withholding the name of the beneficiary who received a $2.5-million commission for the 1974 sale of a Candu reactor to Argentina.

The CBC quotes Anito Capra, director-general of the Swiss bank Banca della Svizzera Italiana, as saying that the money was given to a beneficiary "named by the Canadian authorities."

In Ottawa, a spokesman for Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. said Ron Foster, atomic energy president, and chairman Ross Campbell say they never said there was a beneficiary or that they knew the beneficiary.

The CBC says Capra and Gianfranco Antognini, another senior executive of the Swiss bank, are both former directors of Intercontinental General Trading Establishment of Liechtenstein, the company which received the $2.5 million from Atomic Energy through the Swiss bank.

The CBC quotes Gianfranco as saying the company and the bank knew nothing of the agreement between Canada and Argentina but were simply carrying out the instructions of a client.

VOLCANO ERUPTS

BRUSSELS (AP) — The Nyragongo volcano in eastern Zaire erupted Monday, said reports reaching Brussels today. The government of that African country, denying earlier reports of about 2,000 deaths, said no one was killed.

Diplomatic sources quoting Zaire's Kinshasa radio had given the large casualty figure.

Canadian diplomat Yvon Bouthillette, second secretary at the Canadian Embassy in Kinshasa, the capital of Zaire, had said earlier in a telephone interview initiated from Toronto that he doubted the high death toll figures.

Bouthillette said the town of Goma was evacuated when lava flowed from the erupting volcano nearby, Goma is just north of Lake Kivu, near Rwanda which is east of Zaire.

The ARP news agency in Rwanda said a substantial number of persons died but it gave no total figure.

Cut-Off Land Offer Promised

Labor Minister Allan Williams said today he hopes to have a united federal-provincial position on Indian cut-off lands to present to Indian negotiators within a month.

Williams, the minister responsible for Indian affairs, met in Calgary Tuesday with federal Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand and said today the two governments are closer than they have ever been to reaching agreement on a cost-sharing formula for settlement on the cut-off land claims.

There are about 33,000 acres in the cut-off land dispute, involving 23 Indian bands.

Williams said he expects to have a joint federal-provincial offer worked out in about two weeks and hopes to present it to Indian negotiators within a month.

He would not speculate on how long negotiations would take, saying there are detailed and specific problems with some bands while other areas could be settled quickly.

He said the offer by the two governments is "fair and just." Details of the offer will not be released until it is presented to Indian negotiators.

WAY PAVED FOR HOT TIME IN SESSION

The New Democratic Party was in a state of disarray when the B.C. Legislative assembly opened a year ago, but the way has been paved for the opposition to step on the gas this time.

The 31st assembly opens Thursday and two items not on the order paper — the Quasar-Cheyene stock-trading scandal and B.C. Rail's $2.5 million out-of-court settlement with MEL Paving — are expected to dominate the sitting.

Social Credit Premier Bill Bennett is also expected to have problems holding the line on taxes in the face of Federal-provincial revenue-sharing agreement. See story on page 3.

He said the two-hour predawn raid was "highly successful" and there were no incidents.

U.S. Considers Tanker Controls

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A flood of recent oil tanker accidents has prompted serious consideration of a 200-mile United States pollution control zone, similar to Canada's claim of jurisdiction over Arctic waters.

The idea was discussed Tuesday at a hearing called by Senator Warren Magnuson of Washington State, chairman of the Senate commerce committee.

Although the U.S. has, until recently, strongly opposed unilateral action in establishing the law of the sea, including refusal to recognize Canada's Arctic Pollution Control Act, a leading official in President Gerald Ford's departing administration suggested reconsideration of that opposition.

The U.S. has already decided to impose a 200-mile fishing control zone on March 1 and Russell Train, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, expressed skepticism that continuing international negotiations would solve the polution problem dramatized by 11 oil tanker accidents in or near U.S. waters during the past month.

"Given the increasing uncertainties of the outcome of the Law of the Sea negotiations, we should now reconsider promptly and aggressively our unilateral options," Train said.

Sen. Edward Kennedy in a separate move has introduced a bill requiring tankers to follow established sealanes within 20 miles of U.S. shores.

The Massachusetts Democrat, who introduced the bill Tuesday, called for a traffic control system modeled on that used to separate aircraft approaching major airports. It also would set construction standards, including double bottoms, for tankers entering U.S. ports.

But a member of Ford's cabinet, Transportation Secretary William Coleman, was reluctant about the move. "The day of the gunboat is over," he said. "If Vietnam taught us anything, it was that you don't solve problems when you act unilaterally."

However, Coleman said he was working with Train to set up a task force on the whole problem of marine pollution and had already established a panel within his department to review laws and regulations on tanker traffic.

Coleman agreed that something should be done to increase safety both for tankers bound for U.S. ports and those passing through U.S. waters.

He said there are about 35 tankers a day bringing oil into the U.S.

"Despite the shock of the Arab oil embargo and the fact that we all committed ourselves to be energy independent in this country, that didn't happen and today we're importing 43 per cent of our oil," he said.

Strongest support for setting up a pollution control zone came from Senator Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, who said: "We're going to pass a law to put somebody out there and we're not going to need the United Nations to do it."

Gunmen Grab $21,056 After Abducting Driver

By DEREK SIDENUIS
Times Staff

A 26-year-old Victoria man abducted Tuesday by two men who robbed a Saanich bank of $21,056 said today he has never been more terrified — or cold — in his life.

"I thought this was it. This was the end," George Carroll, of 200 Dallas said in an interview.

Carroll said he had just climbed into his car at the Mayfair shopping centre at about 10:35 a.m. when two men wearing grey scarves over their faces and sunglasses "popped up out of nowhere."

He said one of the men produced what appeared to be a .38-calibre revolver with a six-inch barrel and told him to move over and look straight ahead.

"I wasn't about to argue," Carroll said.

He said the man with gun climbed into the back seat of his 1971 Chevrolet Impala while the other took the driver's seat.

Before leaving they made Carroll don a pair of sunglasses painted black so he couldn't see and ordered him to "keep quiet and act nautral."

The abduction marked the start of a 2½-hour drama that culminated in the ribbery of the Royal Bank aat Gorge and Tillicum and the largest haul of any bank robbery in Greater Victoria history.

Carroll said his abductors both in their early 20s, were "real cool and quiet.".

At one point, he said, they told him they were not homosexuals and he shouldn't worry about his car.

"I didn't know what they wanted and didn't ask," Carroll said. "We were passing Beaver Lake Park when one of the men said 'Let's pull in here . . . this looks okay'."

HUME
. . . ringside seat

Carroll said the men ordered him out and asked him if he kept anything to keep him warm. He replied he had an old carpet in the trunk. One of the men got it.

They marched him at gunpoint abut 200 yards into the bush, he said.

One of the men, who wore a ski jacket, offered to trade jackets with Carroll who was only clad in a light sports coat. Carroll refused.

"I said I was all right I just wanted to get it over."

The men then tied his hands around a four-inch sapling using white elastic tape and placed the carpet around his shoulders. They told him they would phone police later to tell him where he was .

He said he managed to dislodge the glasses and spent an estimated 90 minutes in the freezing rain watching cars drive along Pat Bay Highway.

"I hollered and hollered," he said. "But, of course, no one could hear me. I've never been colder in my life."

Finally, around noon, Gordon Hartley, 969 Saturna Place, drove into the park parking lot to exercise his dog.

Hartley said he heard Carroll's shouts the moment he opened the door, but didn't know where they were coming from.

"At first I thought someone had fallen into the pond nearby," he said, "then I saw him way back in the bush."

When Hartley, suspicious, picked up a big stick, Carroll yelled "It's okay . . . my hands are tied."

Hartley cut Carroll loose and took him to the Royal Oak Inn where police were called.

"I haven't been in the park for years. I don't know what took me in there just then. I guess it was his Guardian Angel," Hartley told The Times.

Saanich police said the actual robbery occurred at 11:25 a.m.

Inspector Robin Stewart said two men stormed into the bank. One man stood by the door and held off bank staff and 11 customers while the other ran behind the counter and scooped out cash from four tellers' cash drawers.

It took about a minute, Stewart said.

The pair then sped off in Carroll's car. The vehicle was found a short time later abandoned in the Gorge Road Hospital parking lot.

Stephen Hume, an eyewitness to the lightning robbery, said he saw the men enter the bank.

Hume said the pair pulled up their scarves around their faces as they entered to pull the robbery.

At about 12:30 p.m. Saanich police received a call presumably from one of the robbers telling them where they could find Carroll.

It was the second time in the past five weeks the bank had been robbed.

Back Incorporation Says Region Leader

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

People in Colwood-Langford who are unhappy with regional government should quit beefing and concentrate on getting their own municipal government, regional board chairman Jim Campbell said today.

In an inaugural speech as he began his fourth term as chairman, the 58-year-old farmer from Saturna Island also got off oblique shots at Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis, a former board chairman.

"The failure of the provincial government to give regional districts adequate power to act has given us an excellent and usually valid excuse for delay and failures in providing service," he said.

"I hope that excuse is soon removed."

"I would like to be able now to draw attention to some achievement of the ministry in its first year which justified that confidence. Unfortunately, I cannot."

In an interview earlier the chairman said he would rank as the provincial government's first priority among regional issues locally correcting the "utterly rediculous" situation where the province gives the regional board the job of planning in the outlying areas while retaining authority to approve subdivisions there.

On turning Colwood-Langford into a separate municipality, it's not technical questions which delay such a move but lack of support from residents who are afraid it will mean higher taxes, he said.

"I hope that the discontented in those areas will focus their energy in a positive way towards control of their own destiny by working for municipal status in the new year, instead of merely knocking the region."

A regional committee studying the merits of establishing a municipality in the western community is expected to make an interim report next month. A referendum on the question is likely later this year.

Gilmour Hanging In There

Mediator Clark Gilmour appears ready to make another effort to settle the dispute between Victoria firemen and the city.

Union local president Ross Cameron said he expects to hear from Gilmour today about the possibility of more meetings.

The firemen have rejected Gilmour's recommendations for settlement and served 72-hour strike notice Monday. However, they can't go on strike until Gilmour withdraws.

Meanwhile, the B.C. Labor Relations Board is expected to rule Friday on the city's application for a cease-and-desist order on the firemen's work-to-rule measures related to firehall maintenance.

The board conducted a one-day hearing on the application Tuesday and is also expected to rule on the city's request for a decision on whether the collective agreement for a 1976 contract was in fact a collective agreement.

Salesmen Picket Car Dealer After Whole Team Dismissed

Car salesmen at Cornell Chevrolet Oldsmobile Ltd. picketed the company's sales offices today to protest the firing of the entire sales team.

All 14 salesmen at the Douglas and Finlayson dealership were told Tuesday night to hand in their company car keys and pick up their pay cheques this afternoon.

The salesmen said today they feel they were dismissed because they proposed a written schedule of increased commission rates to management Tuesday morning.

However, dealership owner Cornell Babie, said the request for a compensation plan for 1977 had very little to do with the firings.

"It's an internal type of thing," he said, related to a change in the office structure and the fact that a new computer sysem is going to be brought in within the next month or so.

However, he did say that some of the sales staff have "been going outside their area of responsibility" but declined to be specific.

"It's quite a normal upgrading of staff," he said.

Asked if he felt badly about firing all 14 salesmen on the same day without any notice he said "Yes, it shakes me up pretty badly.

"But sooner or later it was going to have to happen."

Art Boyer, who has been a salesman at Cornell for 14 years, said the sales people are only requesting a commission schedule similar to one which has been in existence at Empress Pontiac-Buick for the past four years.

He said there was absolutely no response from the company to the proposal though the salesmen were prepared to sit down and negotiate.

The pickets will remain up for at least the rest of the day, he said, and meanwhile the salesmen will pursue avenues of recourse.

Herb Hill, another Cornell salesman, said unlike other car dealerships, Cornell has never had a written contract with its salesmen.

He said for a company to fire all its sales staff on the same day is ridiculous and irresponsible.

Babie said it will likely take about 60 to 90 days to install the new computer system and about two to three weeks o replace the sales staff.

Babie said contrary to earlier reports Eric Burdon, GM general manager for B.C., will not be getting involved in the situation.

"I'm an independent businessman and it has nothing to do with him."

First, the Cocktails

Cocktail hospitality clashed with zoning business for Victoria city council members Tuesday, and it was the dry engagement which had to take second place.

Council postponed three public hearings after Mayor Mike Young informed more than 50 members of the public that there was insufficient time to deal with the business that day.

Less than two hours later, shortly after council had dealt with the rest of the agenda, Young and four aldermen — Helen Beirnes, Murray Glazier, Bob Wright and Bill Tindall — attended a cocktail party at the Imperial Inn hosted by promoters of the Veron winter carnival.

There had been enough prior notice of the cocktail party for its inclusion in this week's schedule of council engagements, published last Friday.

As the public seating area rapidly emptied after Young's explanation, many of those leaving could be heard muttering angrily.

The three hearings set aside were deferred to 7 p.m. Feb. 8.

A. No, there is nothing here. It's a doctor-patient-family decision.

Doctor Sounded Red Alert and Bluepeace Was Born

At 2 p.m. Tuesday I became the sixth member of Bluepeace.

It's a new group which vows to battle oil tanker traffic in Canadian waters and prevent the giant ships from leaving out coasts all fuddle-duddled up — to paraphrase Mr. Trudeau.

A mammoth task? Sure it is. But don't be put off. For, with a boom in membership and public support, the right pressure can be put on Ottawa to introduce legislation making it tougher for poorly-equipped and cheaply-staffed tankers to enter Canadian waters.

The least the group can do is draw attention to the problem in much the same way the unrelated but similar Greenpeace group has successfully done in its battles against nuclear testing and the slaughter of seals and whales.

Bluepeace is the brainchild of 53-year-old Victoria orthopedic surgeon Harry Carter. And "new" is the operative word. It's so new, in fact, he doesn't know where he's going next!

A long-time environmentalist and bird-watcher, Dr. Carter was suddenly struck with the idea of doing something Monday night — 24 hours after watching W5 on TV.

The program dealt partly with the current rash of super-tanker sinkings and the havoc caused by the millions of gallons of spewed-out oil. It pointed out that the Americans are considering building a refinery in Maine but that in order to reach it, the huge tankers would have to go through Canadian waters.

Carter was furious.

"It burns me up," he confessed over lunch Tuesday, "why some junky

max low

country like Liberia — who in the hell even knows where it is? — can provide a flag of convenience that will bring super-tankers into our backyard."

He called a couple of friends, asked them if they'd join him, then phoned the press and promptly announced the birth of Bluepeace.

Joining Carter are Marilyn Paul, Elizabeth Courtnall and Kay Lines and her husband Ken. I ws No. 6 to sign on to the Bluepeace crew, as it were, and by the time I was halfway through typing this, two other men — George Cotterill of Sooke and Dr. Jack Morrison of Victoria — had phoned Harry to say they were with him.

But a mere eight people won't be enough to crew the good ship Bluepeace to victory. Carter wants members and invites anyone interested in helping in any way — anyone who has been annoyed, angered or distressed by the recent massive oil spills — to call him at either 598-1055 or 384-4121.

"We want to get a public uprising," he told me. "Stop the Mongol hordes, sort of thing. Rise up, ye peasants, and strike. And who in the hell wants a Liberian tanker in their backyard?"

Carter said he felt Bluepeace should concentrate first on Canada's Atlantic Coast.

"My primary concern, of course, is my own backyard, the coast of B.C. But if you don't get them to do something with the East Coast, there won't be anything done here, either."

His big worry is that nothing will be done to protect the West Coast by the time super-tankers start going into Kitimat or running from the Alaska Pipeline down through Juan de Fuca Strait to Washington. For us, the consequences are awesome, he said.

"The politicians in Ottawa waste their time with useless things like bilingualism and they ignore important things like our environment," Carter charged.

CARTER
. . . "burns me up"

So far, he admits his outburst is strictly emotional.

"I'm not a lawmaker or a politicians," he said, though Carter, a family man with four kids, did once serve as an Oak Bay alderman for two years after a successful campaign on a platform fighting waterfront highrises.

What is the next move for Bluepeace? He doesn't know.

"I just thought of it last night and I had to work this morning," he explained. "I'm not retired. Im' a busy, working doctor. But I do think if you're concerned about something, mumbling to your wife in the kitchen never accomplishes anything."

Carter said he doesn't want to charge members anything to join Bluepeace because "everyone is always asking for money from you." Yet he admits he hasn't given a thought to how the project is going to be funded.

Mrs. Lines, an experienced organizer, suggested that most people would not object to paying a nominal membership fee, say of $1 each. But Carter doesn't feel a lot of money will be needed.

"What we have to do is apply enough public pressure to get Ottawa to make our own regulations tough enough so that if these foreign tankers don't measure up they don't come here," Carter said. "It's as simple as that."

He doesn't think Bluepeace will follow the Greenpeace lead in intercepting vessels because the tankers take more than three miles to stop and, anyway, by that stage it would be too late.

"However, everyone has fantasies, right?" he added with a twinkle in his eye. "And I do have a boat — a 36-foot trawler which we've used for bird-watching trips around the Island and up to Alaska."

Harry smiled wryly.

"Who knows, if it comes to a showdown . . . I could load her up like the African Queen and sail out into the Strait in protest!"

New Blast at CIDA

OTTAWA — Canada's billion-dollar foreign aid program is under attack and there is mounting pressure for a full-scale inquiry into possible mismanagement of public funds.

The latest wave of criticism comes in the wake of charges by former Ontario MLA Morton Shulman that Canadian International Development Agency representatives in Haiti were spending money foolishly and not for the purposes for which it was intended.

Among Shulman's allegations are that the CIDA officials had bought a "yacht" and that more work had been done on their own headquarters than on the projects they were supposed to be building in the poverty-stricken Caribbean country.

Paul Gerin-Lajoie, president of the agency, told reporters Tuesday that the so-called yacht was a 30-foot open boat provided by the Haitian government to help CIDA workers reach parts of the project area inaccessible by road.

Charles Morrow, chief information officer for the agency, said later that one of the CIDA employees, an enthusiastic sailor, had also bought a boat, but with his own funds.

MDs ATTACKING LUNG FAILURE

MONTREAL (CP) — Two Montreal doctors are researching a new process which might be able to save the one third of adults who die of lung failure in hospital intensive-care wards.

Dr. John Hewson and Dr. Anthony Holland, anesthetists at Montreal General Hopital, affiliated with McGill University, have been experimenting since 1974 on a glucose-inhalation treatment for patients showing signs of lung collapse.

They believe their research is not being duplicated anywhere. If further research with animals is successful, they said in a recent interview, the process may be used on humans within two years.

In theory, the process is remarkably simple. Lung failure "is due in large part to decrease production of a substance called surfactant, which reduces the surface tension of the lungs," Dr. Hewson wrote in the monthly publication, Research McGill.

"Metabollic production of surfactant is in turn dependent on an adequate oxygen supply from one side of the lung membrane and an adequate "fuel" supply from the other, circulatory, side."

The fuel is glucose, or blood sugar, normally supplied though the arteries and capillaries leading into the lungs. But the lungs of an intensive-care patient admitted for shock or internal hemorrhaging may not receive enough glucose from the blood.

So the lungs will collapse if enough surfactant is not produced by the 50 million tiny air sacs which line the lungs and form the lung membrane.

Dutch Pilot 'Avoided' Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — A Dutch airline pilot said Tuesday his concern about the "quite serious situation" in Canadian airspace last June prompted him to take steps to reroute a KLM Royal Dutch Airlines flight through the United States.

John Ellison-Davis, a British-born pilot who has been with KLM since 1950, told the Federal Court of Canada that he judged Canadian air traffic control to be unreliable after landing at Toronto International Airport last June 22 during the nationwide air dispute.

Mr. Ellison-Davis said he telephoned KLM officials in Amsterdam and the airline agreed to reroute a flight from Toronto the following day through U.S. airspace.

The KLM pilot was appearing as a witness in a Federal Court hearing on contempt of court charges against the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association CALPA, association president Ken Maley, and two top CALPA officials who are Air Canada pilots, Norman Foster and Robert McKinnon.

Mr. Justice A. A. Cattnach said he feels there is no evidence to justify finding Mr. Foster in contempt of court.

U.K. Union Power Seen Canada Model

LONDON (CP) — Canadian Labor Minister John Munro maintains that Canada would benefit if Canadian unions had more strength.

Asked what Canada could learn from Britain's labor relations, Munro cited Tuesday the "monolithic" power of the British union movement as a model that would improve Canadian industrial relations.

He said in an interview that Canada had suffered from disunity and weakness in its labor organizations and renewed his call for closer ties among unions, management and the federal government.

But Munro acknowledged that unions are unpopular in Canada with some groups, and said the suggestion of increasing their power might be even more unpopular.

Despite the power of British unions, concentrated in the Trades Union Congress, and contrary to Britain's reputation as a land of strikes, this country has had far fewer strikes than Canada in the last year in proportion to population.

Munro was in London for a day, meeting British Employment Minister Albert Booth and attending a formal dinner in the financial district before flying home today.

His stop-over, which follows visits to West Germany and Israel, was shortened by a day so he could attend an Ottawa cabinet meeting Thursday.

He said his major interest throughout his tour has been the ways other countries have achieved co-operation in labor affairs.

West Germany, Israel and Britain all are marked by close links between unions and the government, even when labor parties are not in power.

No Meddling, Rossi Pledges

By PETER THOMSON
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — France is unlikely to embarrass Canada by trying to establish new relationships with Quebec, French Trade Minister Andre Rossi indicated Tuesday.

"France has no intention of changing its traditional position, which is not to intervene in the internal concerns of other countries," Rossi told a press conference.

He is the first senior French minister to visit Canada since the Parti Quebecois election victory.

The French minister said he did not forsee any complications arising from the election of a separatist government in Quebec, but stressed that his visit was on economic matters, not political.

Rossi said there was no particular significance to the fact he had visited Ottawa before going on to Quebec to discuss matters that fall within provincial jurisdiction.

"It is just the way things were arranged," Rossi said.

The visit to Quebec, he said, was to deal with matters within provincial jurisdiction such as technical and cultural co-operation.

The France-Quebec relations are covered under an umbrella agreement between France and Canada.

The French trade minister said he had had two days of "frank and friendly discussions" with federal ministers and officials — including a session with Prime Minister Trudeau and several with Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jean Chretien.

He said Trudeau had expressed a concern that relations between France and Canada had not expanded as much as desired.

Rossi, who was accompanied by 10 senior trade officials, noted that while France and Canada are both among the 10 leading trading nations in the world, each exports less than one per cent of its foreign shipment to the other country.

He, and Canadian minister Jean Chretien, both expressed a desire to increase the figure to two per cent.

Rossi said that a considerable effort, a follow-up to the meeting of the Joint Economic Committee, is necessary to boost trade.

France stands second among European countries in investment in Canada, but it is a modest amount, Rossi added.

Autoplan Insurance Safe Driving Discount

You will receive a 17.5% discount on your 1977/78 Autoplan Insurance if you qualify

To qualify, your driving record must be free of blameworthy* claims during the period October 1, 1975 to September 30, 1976. The discount will automatically be shown on your Autoplan insurance and Motor Vehicle Licence Renewal Form, which you will receive by mail. If you do not receive a renewal form in the mail take your current 1976/77 Certificate of Insurance to any Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office.

CHECK THE RENEWAL FORM

If the discount is not shown and you believe you qualify, discuss it with your Autoplan agent or Motor Vehicle Branch office, when you renew your insurance and motor vehicle licence. Do not write on the form itself. If you wish to make any changes, please record them on a separate piece of paper and present them to your agent when you renew.

In addition to the 17.5% Safe Driving Discount, single male drivers under 25 who qualify will also receive a Safe Driving Grant equal to 25% of their 1976/77 Autoplan insurance premium.

However, this special grant to single male drivers under 25 will be by separate cheque, and must be applied for. Applications for the Single Male Drivers Under 25 Grant must be completed by April 1, 1977. They must be mailed to the Insurance Corporation of British Columbia, P.O. Box 5050, Vancouver, B.C. V6B 4T4.

A single male driver under 25 will qualify if:

Sometime since March 1, 1976, a Certificate of Insurance was issued in any of the rate classes 04, 14, 204, or 214 for the vehicle of which he was the owner or principal operator.

As the owner or principal operator he has accumulated not more than five penalty points on his driver's licence since January 1, 1976.

Since that date the insured vehicle has not been involved in a blameworthy* claim.

And the vehicle was not used for commercial delivery purposes nor was part of a fleet.

If you are a single male driver under 25 and you did not receive an application form in the mail, you can get one from any convenient Motor Vehicle Branch office.

A blameworthy claim is one where the driver, (no matter who was driving), was responsible to any extent for causing bodily injury, property damage, or collision damage and for which a claim or loss has been paid by the Corporation. It should be noted, however, that any hit-and-run collision claim settlement is not classified as a blameworthy claim.

In most cases Autoplan premiums are lower in B.C. than in other provinces. Here's an example for your specific region.
Public Liability and Property Damage $300,000 inclusive limits. Collision $200 deductible. Comprehensive $50 deductible.

Ferry Data Proves Dip

Traffic statistics released by B.C. Ferries prove beyond any doubt the doubling of the ferry rates June 1 was solely responsible for reduced tourist traffic in Victoria last year, the Chamber of Commerce says.

Chamber president Alan Emery said today the trend from January through May 1976 showed a steady increase in traffic, but after June 1, ferry usage dropped an average of 25 per cent over the rest of the year.

"While the government claimed the U.S. Bicentennial, poor weather and a general economic belt-tightening were partly to blame, we maintained steadfastly from the day the rates were doubled, that was the sole reason for the decline," Emery said.

The statistics show vehicle traffic last year was 14.6 per cent below 1975 while passenger traffic dropped 12.5 per cent.

The number of vehicles dropped from 2,309,799 in 1975 to 1,971,734 while the passenger total dropped from 3,514,674 to 2,293,567 — a dip of 834,123 persons.

The table below shows the month-by-month traffic during the year.

Al Frame, president of the Victoria Visitors Information Centre, said the figures showing the marked drop in ferry traffic after June 1 are nothing new to him.

"They prove just what we've been saying all along." He added that the bureau is still pushing for reductions for foot passengers — a move also being pursued by Charles Gallagher, general manager of the ferry fleet.

Gallagher said he would make recommendations concerning foot-passenger fare reductions during off-peak periods when the new board of directors of the B.C. Ferry Corporation meets in the next few weeks.

TWO WINNERS

The 11th week of the Prevue Payoff Puzzle proved lucky for not one, but two, contestants.

Mrs. B. Egan of 1720 Sprucewood and S. W. Rohr of 1320 Point St. both turned in correct answers and will split the $550 prize receiving $275 each.

Judging of the contest, delayed a week by the mails, was completed just before noon today, too late for comments from the lucky winners. Solution to the puzzle will be published in tomorrow's Times and prize for the new puzzle in Friday's Prevue section starts at $100.

SNOWED UNDER but obviously enjoying it, Montreal area twins Cathy and Linda Brassard, 11, dig through the 10-inch snowfall that blanketed city and the rest of Quebec and southern Ontario Monday.

Bennett Orders Trading Probe

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

A full judicial inquiry into the stock trading activities of two natural gas and land acquisitions in the Grizzly Valley gas field area will begin next week.

Premier Bill Bennett announced late Tuesday that Mr. Justice Walter Kirke Smith of the B.C. Supreme Court has been appointed commissioner in charge of the probe.

He will investigate whether anyone made use of inside government information to deal in stocks of Quasar and Cheyenne petroleum companies or in land in the area 75 miles southwest of Chetwynd.

Only Monday, Bennett said there was no need for an inquiry and said the attorney-general's investigation into the trading patterns of the two companies was enough.

But Tuesday, after three more people had lost their government jobs because of the affair, he changed his mind.

"It is a sensitive enough area that the public has a right to know," Bennett said.

"I want to find any and all people who abused the public's trust."

The attorney-general's investigation launched Dec. 16 under the Securities Act will continue in conjunction with the Smith public inquiry.

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said today he is pleased with the inquiry, which the opposition has been asking for two weeks, but is curious about "what new evidence changed the premier's mind in 24 hours."

Bennett revealed for the first time Tuesday that it was Vancouver South Social Credit MLA Stephen Rogers who first told Attorney-General Garde Gardom of "alleged stock purchases by a person or persons with confidential information relating to the proposed pipeline."

Bennett's version of the sequence of events leading up to the attorney-general's investigation differs from the version revealed earlier by Economic Development Minister Don Phillips.

Bennett said Rogers told Gardom of the alleged misuse of public information shortly after government approval of the $100 million Grizzly Valley pipeline was announced Dec. 10.

Bennett said Gardom then launched his investigation and told Phillips that his special adviser, Arthur Weeks, owned shares in Cheyenne Petroleum, one of the companies which will benefit from the pipeline.

Aftter Phillips received the information from the attorney-general, he fired Weeks Dec. 21.

Both Weeks and Phillips said earlier that Phillips was first informed of Weeks' actions by Weeks himself on Dec. 19.

Mr. Justice Smith said today he will finish the court sittings he has this week and will start preparations for his inquiry next week.

He said he expects the inquiry will be public and that it will be held in Vancouver.

The terms of reference given the judge call for an inquiry to find out — in addition to the share trading — "whether any person or corporation has purchased or sold property, real or personal, as a result of confidential information which they may have received prior to the 10th day of December,

POLICE AWED BY VAULT LOOT

VANCOUVER (CP) — Awed police officers waded knee-deep Tuesday in millions of dollars in cash, jewels and gold, scattered on the floor of a Vancouver vault in the course of what some detectives say could be the world's biggest robbery.

The carefully-executed raid was foiled by a Vancouver International Airport baggage handler who became suspicious Monday when he found a suitcase almost too heavy to lift. When a supervisor opened the bag he found a fortune in bullion, cash and jewels.

The RCMP were called in, found eight more stuffed suitcases and arrested three suspects before the raid on the vault had been reported.

Police are still counting the loot, stolen from 2,500 safety deposit boxes in a downtown vault. They estimate the robbery netted "tens of millions," which would eclipse the $10 million in jewels, gold bars, cash and securities stolen last year at Nice, France.

"I was knee-deep in valuables," said Jeff Hilton of the police crime laboratory. "It was incredible."

Police said they suspect a number of boxholders will be reluctant to claim their valuables for fear of running into income tax investigations.

Police also arrested two suspects in Winnipeg who had left Vancouver on a Toronto flight that was forced back to Winnipeg by bad weather. The two were returned to Vancouver Tuesday night.

Police said thieves entered the building containing the vault sometime after closing Friday through a second-floor window near a fire escape.

The thieves opened a ground-floor door to an adjoining lane and moved some equipment to the basement. There they attacked the rear wall of the 40-by-15-foot vault which houses 5,000 deposit boxes.

"They drilled through 24 inches of concrete with diamond core drills and burned through 3½ inches of steel with a thermal lance," said Hilton. "The thermal lance causes concrete to flow like lava."

The thieves cut a hole two feet in diameter, levered out the concrete plug in the middle and clambered into the vault. Inside, they broke open about half the boxes, taking only the most valuable items, cash and gold. Before leaving, they hid four empty oxygen and acetylene tanks used for the cutting torch.

The vault had no alarm and the company had not insured the vault's contents.

"They were counting on the thickness of the wall," said one detective.

AECL Agent's Name Withheld?

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC says Canadian authorities are withholding the name of the beneficiary who received a $2.5-million commission for the 1974 sale of a Candu reactor to Argentina.

The CBC quotes Anito Capra, director-general of the Swiss bank Banca della Svizzera Italiana, as saying that the money was given to a beneficiary "named by the Canadian authorities."

In Ottawa, a spokesman for Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd. said Ron Foster, atomic energy president, and chairman Ross Campbell say they never said there was a beneficiary or that they knew the beneficiary.

The CBC says Capra and Gianfranco Antognini, another senior executive of the Swiss bank, are both former directors of Intercontinental General Trading Establishment of Liechtenstein, the company which received the $2.5 million from Atomic Energy through the Swiss bank.

The CBC quotes Gianfranco as saying the company and the bank knew nothing of the agreement between Canada and Argentina but were simply carrying out the instructions of a client.

VOLCANO ERUPTS

BRUSSELS (AP) — The Nyragongo volcano in eastern Zaire erupted Monday, said reports reaching Brussels today. The government of that African country, denying earlier reports of about 2,000 deaths, said no one was killed.

Diplomatic sources quoting Zaire's Kinshasa radio had given the large casualty figure.

Canadian diplomat Yvon Bouthillette, second secretary at the Canadian Embassy in Kinshasa, the capital of Zaire, had said earlier in a telephone interview initiated from Toronto that he doubted the high death toll figures.

Bouthillette said the town of Goma was evacuated when lava flowed from the erupting volcano nearby, Goma is just north of Lake Kivu, near Rwanda which is east of Zaire.

The ARP news agency in Rwanda said a substantial number of persons died but it gave no total figure.

Cut-Off Land Offer Promised

Labor Minister Allan Williams said today he hopes to have a united federal-provincial position on Indian cut-off lands to present to Indian negotiators within a month.

Williams, the minister responsible for Indian affairs, met in Calgary Tuesday with federal Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand and said today the two governments are closer than they have ever been to reaching agreement on a cost-sharing formula for settlement on the cut-off land claims.

There are about 33,000 acres in the cut-off land dispute, involving 23 Indian bands.

Williams said he expects to have a joint federal-provincial offer worked out in about two weeks and hopes to present it to Indian negotiators within a month.

He would not speculate on how long negotiations would take, saying there are detailed and specific problems with some bands while other areas could be settled quickly.

He said the offer by the two governments is "fair and just." Details of the offer will not be released until it is presented to Indian negotiators.

WAY PAVED FOR HOT TIME IN SESSION

The New Democratic Party was in a state of disarray when the B.C. Legislative assembly opened a year ago, but the way has been paved for the opposition to step on the gas this time.

The second session of 31st assembly opens Thursday and two items not on the order paper — the Quasar-Cheyenne stock-trading scandal and B.C. Rail's $2.5 million out-of-court settlement with MEL Paving — are expected to dominate the sitting.

Social Credit Premier Bill Bennett is also expected to have problems holding the line on taxes in the face of a Federal-provincial revenue-sharing agreement. See story on page 3.

South Africa Police Claim Bombers Held

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (UPI) — Riot police and detectives raided homes in the black township of Langa early today and arrested 95 persons on a number of charges, including the gasoline bombing of six schools, police reported.

A police spokesman said among those arrested were blacks suspected of being members of the "Comrades Movement," a group of young black militants suspected of trying to keep students away from schools.

He said the two-hour predawn raid was "highly successful" and there were no incidents.

Some of those arrested will be charged with arson in connection with attempts to burn down six black schools in Langa on Monday, the spokesman said. Gasoline bombs were thrown at the buildings and two schools were seriously damaged.

Education officials said attendance was down Tuesday as a result of the bombings but improved somewhat today.

Meanwhile, five more persons — three men and two women — have been burned alive as sorcerers in black villages near Petersburg, bringing to 14 the number of witchcraft killings in the area since November, police said today.

U.S. Considers Tanker Controls

By FRANK RUTTER
Times Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A flood of recent oil tanker accidents has prompted serious consideration of a 200-mile United States pollution control zone, similar to Canada's claim of jurisdiction over Arctic waters.

The idea was discussed Tuesday at a hearing called by Senator Warren Magnuson of Washington State, chairman of the Senate commerce committee.

Although the U.S. has, until recently, strongly opposed unilateral action in establishing the law of the sea, including refusal to recognize Canada's Arctic Pollution Control Act, a leading official in President Gerald Ford's departing administration suggested reconsideration of that opposition.

The U.S. has already decided to impose a 200-mile fishing control zone on March 1 and Russell Train, head of the Environmental Protection Agency, expressed skepticism that continuing international negotiations would solve the pollution problem dramatized by 11 oil tanker accidents in or near U.S. waters during the past month.

"Given the increasing uncertainties of the outcome of the Law of the Sea negotiations, we should now reconsider promptly and aggressively our unilateral options," Train said.

Sen. Edward Kennedy in a separate move has introduced a bill requiring tankers to follow established sealanes within 20 miles of U.S. shores.

The Massachusetts Democrat, who introduced the bill Tuesday, called for a traffic control system modeled on that used to separate aircraft approaching major airports. It also would set construction standards, including double bottoms, for tankers entering U.S. ports.

But a member of Ford's cabinet, Transportation Secretary William Coleman, was reluctant about the move. "The day of the gunboat is over," he said. "If Vietnam taught us anything, it was that you don't solve problems when you act unilaterally."

However, Coleman said he was working with Train to set up a task force on the whole problem of marine pollution and had already established a panel within his department to review laws and regulations on tanker traffic.

Coleman agreed that something should be done to increase safety both for tankers bound for U.S. ports and those passing through U.S. waters. He said there are about 35 tankers a day bringing oil into the U.S.

'Despite the shock of the Arab oil embargo and the fact that we all committed ourselves to be energy independent in this country, that didn't happen and today we're importing 43 per cent of our oil," he said.

Strongest support for setting up a pollution control zone came from Senator Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, who said: "We're going to pass a law to put somebody out there and we're not going to need the United Nations to do it."
